National Honor Society members leave the stage to call new members during the fall induction.

Students from all Forsyth County high schools talked to college representatives at the annual College Day.

Reynolds students turn to the school library for both information and pleasure.

Conference championship highlights year of well-attended sports events

Proudly displaying our newly acquired 4-A football Conference Cup and willingly boasting of our numerous basketball victories, Reynolds students again prove their tradition of being on the top in the athletic, as well as the educational, departments.

During the football season, the Reynolds Demons marked up two hundred twenty points against the opponents' forty-one. Spirit during the basketball season had a slow start; but as the team's victories mounted, so did the students' enthusiasm.

classic senior traditions

After twelve years of education, we have reached the crucial, but most satisfying year of our lives. Whether these years were well spent depends entirely on our next step in life. What has it meant to be a senior at Reynolds? First, it meant the privileges of seniority in school activities. Second, it encompassed the future responsibilities of independence. Finally, it meant the mark of maturity. As we glance back over our past twelve years, we can see the foundation of both our future successes and failures.

Reynolds displays tremendous school spirit

Each week Pep Board members boost school spirit with imaginative spectaculars.

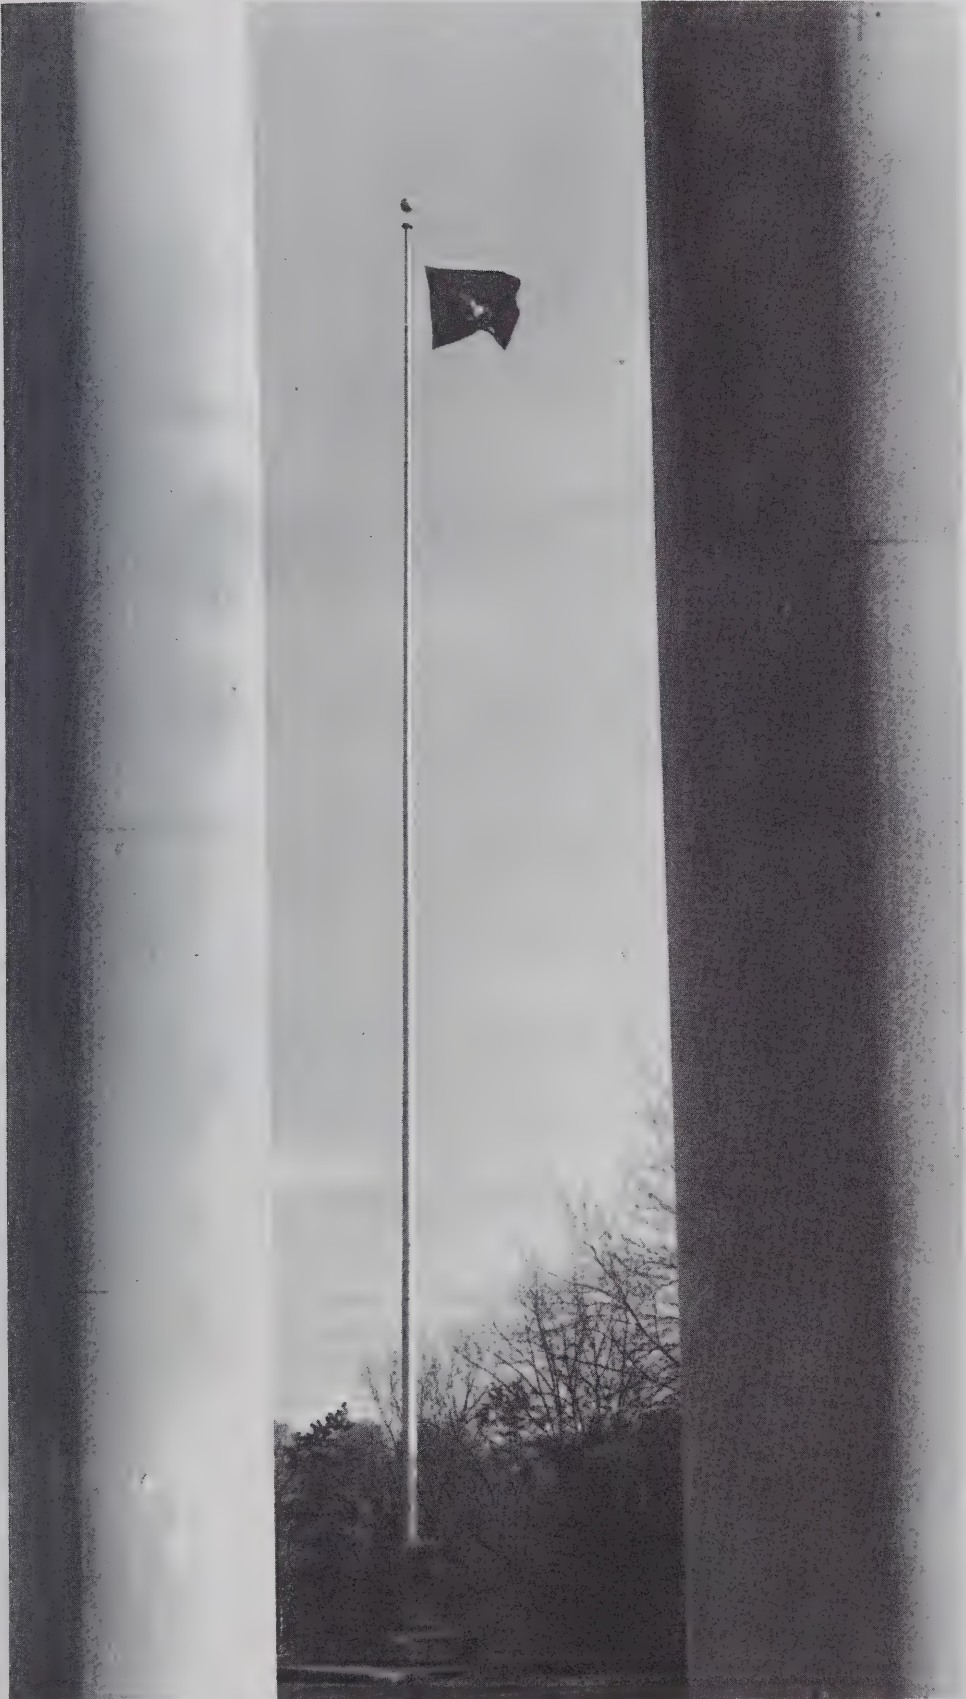

School spirit is that elusive ingredient that gives vitality to any school. At Reynolds, a school famous for its heritage of school spirit, it is more than cheering at a basketball game and playing in the band.

It is marching with the Boots, making beat 'em tags, contributing food, and collecting clothes. It is standing a little straighter during the Alma Mater, painting lines in the parking lot, and acting in a play. School spirit is caring enough about your school to do something, no matter how small, for her.

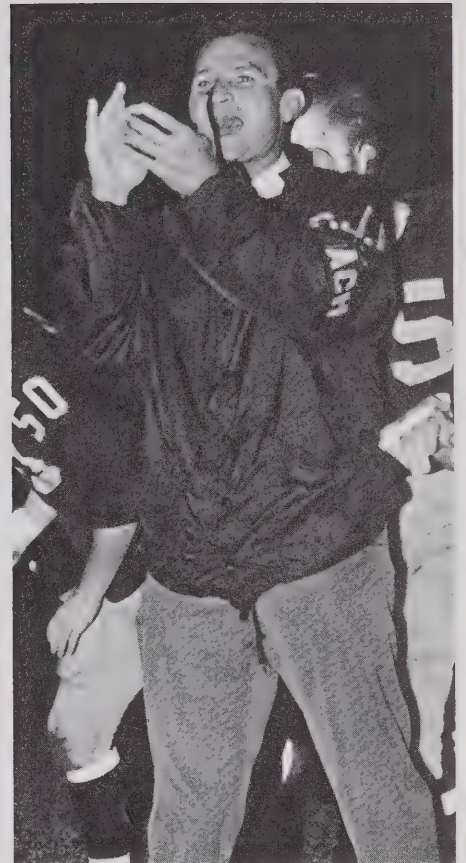

Teaching new cheers and prodding sleepy students to enthusiasm, the varsity cheerleaders spark school spirit at "C" chapel pep rallies.

in every activity

The victory flag, symbol of RJR's athletic successes, flies before each game and hangs on the stage at pep rallies.

Coach Bryson, usually solemn, registers enthusiasm as his Demons execute an excellent play.

Beat 'em tags, bumper stickers, and decals help Reynolds students visually display their school spirit.

Varied activities cater to wide interests

Library pages, who sacrifice their study halls to assist in the library, perform many necessary clerical duties.

Drumbeats echoing through Hanes Park on a sticky September afternoon, carols reverberating through the halls on that last long day before Christmas holidays, staplers clicking quietly after school in a lonely room, chairmen shouting over the din of their committees' members—these are the sounds of activities. Activities are the part of school life in which every student can find enrichment, service, and friendship. Activities have given variety and spirit to our Reynolds heritage.

The Monogram Club dart throw and the other club-sponsored booths at the March of Dimes carnival netted over five hundred dollars for the project.

Liz Schellenberg played the lead in Opening Night, the first production of the Dramatics Club.

Seniors honor their sponsor

During her many years of teaching at Reynolds, Mrs. McDermott has earned not only the respect but also the admiration of her students. Her students soon realize to their delight that a class session with Mrs. McDermott is not an ordinary one, but rather, one filled with humorous anecdotes, whimsical jokes, and lessons on the Roman family and way of life. Mrs. McDermott is the unique individual who is able to give a homily to a student at one minute and in the next, she is laughing about an embarrassing moment in her life. To this unique individual, Mrs. McDermott, we, the senior class, gratefully dedicate the 1967 Black and Gold.

The senior class dedicated the 1967 Black and Gold to Mrs. Margaret McDermott, Latin teacher and senior class sponsor.

Mrs. McDermott discusses the distribution of caps and gowns with senior class officers Ken Craven, Amy Johnson, Jim Richardson, and J.C. Woodall.

Her third period class listens intently as Mrs. McDermott explains the proper translation of a Latin sentence.

Faculty and Administration

He walks into the stuffy classroom and faces the thirsty restless captives whom he will teach for the next fifty-five minutes. As he begins to lecture about the Articles of Confederation, he sees a boy near the back slowly fall asleep. Undaunted, he continues, ignoring, or perhaps reprimanding, the girl doing her algebra on the third row. Later, however, a boy asks a searching question and opens an active discussion on the function of government.

Each day the teacher must face an often apathetic class to whom the assimilation of knowledge is secondary to the acquisition of units. He must tackle endless and seemingly pointless clerical work. But his perseverance often earns a reward in the spark of enthusiasm ignited in one student—a spark that may bring success in the future.

Mr. Deaton begins tenure as principal at Reynolds

Conducting the business of a school involves the teamwork of many people. The School Board, the Administrative Staff, the principal, the assistant principal and the secretaries strive as a unit to make Reynolds High School a successful educational institution of which the students as well as the community may be proud. The disciplinary actions, the myriad of office tasks, the endless decisions, the necessary regulation—all are the duties performed by the administration of Reynolds.

In his first year as principal of Reynolds High School, Mr. Robert Deaton has consistently maintained a friendly relationship with the student body. Yet when necessary, he has shown himself to be a strong disciplinarian. Representing the essence of the spirit of Reynolds, he is equally at home in the administrative offices or on the sidelines of a football field.

School Board Members

Mr. Clyde G. Barber, Jr., Mrs. G.G. Young, Mr. Whit B. East, Jr., Mr. Carl H. Russell.

All regulations center in the main office

In his second year at Reynolds, Mr. Hauser continued his program as assistant principal. Acting as an intermediary for the principal, the faculty, and the student body, Mr. Hauser supervised the routine administrative work and discipline of the school.

Always greeting students with a smile, Mrs. Hart performs numerous tasks in the Reynolds office and serves as secretary to Mr. Deaton.

Office confusion is lessened by the deft hand of Mrs. McCuen as she helps students get through school "red tape" and keeps office materials in order.

ADMINISTRATIVE STAFF MEMBERS

Eugene Johnston, Assistant Superintendent; C.T. Leinbach Jr., Comptroller; Raymond Sarbaugh, Associate Superintendent; Marvin Ward, Superintendent; Ned Smith, Associate Superintendent; Robert Blevins, Assistant Superintendent; Leo Morgan, Assistant Superintendent.

Guidance Department expands, adds counselor

Miss Mary Jane Baker, B.A., M. E. Miss Baker, guidance counselor, helps Reynolds students to choose proper courses and to select appropriate colleges or vocations.

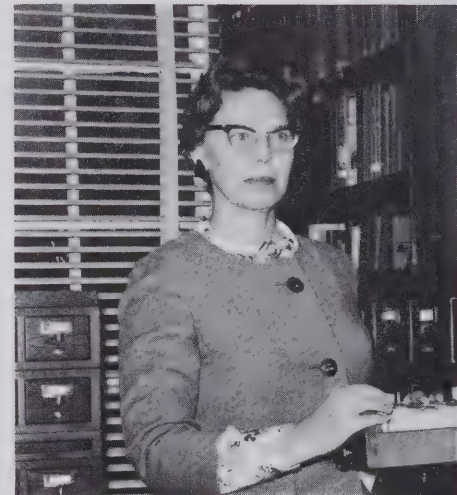

Mr. Robert Walton, B.A., M.A. As a new addition to the guidance department at Reynolds, Mr. Walton works closely with the administration in order to provide the best possible guidance service for the student body.

Of all the educational departments designed to make the student's life less difficult and more pleasant, the Guidance Department is perhaps the most important. Miss Weaver, guidance director, and counselors Miss Baker and Mr. Walton help pupils select their courses and plan for their futures in college or in the business world. With the help of secretary Mrs. Burke, the counselors also handle college transcripts, college testing, and many scholarship applications.

Miss Janie Weaver, B.A. Miss Janie Weaver, guidance director is the first person Reynolds students go to with their problems. With her help each pupil is turned in the right direction during the difficult high school years.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stroupe, B.A. Mrs. Elizabeth Stroupe, librarian, follows both Reynolds and Wake Forest sports closely since one of her sons, who used to play for Reynolds, is now on the Wake Forest basketball team. She frequently attends lectures and social events at the college.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sink, B.A., M.A. Mrs. Elizabeth Sink, an active member of four PTA's, taught Advanced Placement English here until two years ago when she became a full-time librarian.

Mrs. Betty K. Burke. Mrs. Burke, guidance secretary, finds the problems of students to be many and varied. She helps solve these problems by being an efficient aid in the guidance office.

In the Reynolds library, students find a quiet atmosphere in which to do research or to browse for books for both study and pleasure. Librarians Mrs. Stroupe and Mrs. Sink, aided by student pages, work to make a variety of good books and supplementary materials readily available to all teachers and pupils.

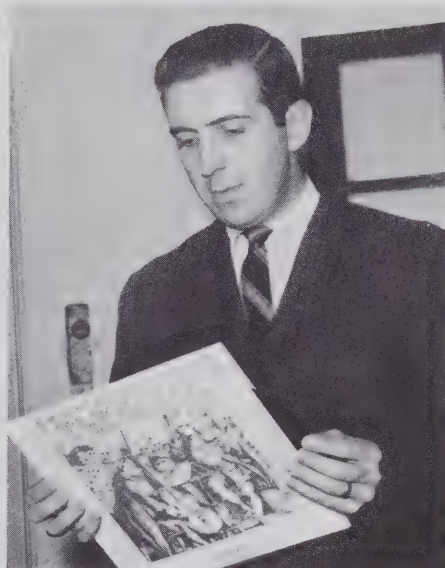

Home Economics study covers wide area

Mrs. Hope Harman, B.S. Besides sponsoring the Health Careers Club and leading many girls in the discovery of home economics, Mrs. Harman also finds time to do gardening and interior decorating.

Home Economics, taught by Mrs. Harman, offers girls a chance to study a wide area of home-related subjects covering every aspect of family and personal living. It helps prepare girls to be well-rounded wives and mothers. Besides such basics as cooking and sewing techniques, students study interior decoration, home buying, advanced clothing construction, and home relations. This year Mrs. Harman, with the help of students during their study of interior design, has redecorated the Home Economics room. Guest speakers from local agencies and pertinent field trips to furniture stores and supermarkets have supplemented the regular courses.

Reynolds' Music Department works each year to bring honors to the school and pleasure to students and teachers. The chorus, directed by Mr. Robert Smith, is made up of several distinct groups which attend contests and present concerts for the school and the public. The orchestra, directed by Mrs. Mock, annually send several of its members to the All-State Symphony. The Reynolds Band, noted for its fine music and precision drill at football games, also attends state band contests and presents programs throughout the year.

Mr. Robert A. Smith, B.A., M.A. Mr. Smith spends most of his time working with music—arranging, composing, and teaching chorus. He enjoys, however, playing jazz piano, painting, and teaching dramatics.

Mrs. Malvina Mock, B.A. Mrs. Mock, new to Reynolds, visits the school every morning to conduct her third period orchestra class. Under her direction the orchestra has expanded to include several new members.

Miss Carol Harkey, B.F.A. Miss Harkey, Reynolds' new art teacher, is a native of Matthews, North Carolina. She toured Europe last summer and fall. In her spare time she enjoys working in all types of art and participating in outdoor sports.

Reynolds' art department, under the guidance of Miss Harkey, seeks to give students interested in art a beneficial outlet for their talents. Displays of paintings by the art classes often decorate the lobby. Art students receive instruction in proper technique and also in such practical applications as interior decoration.

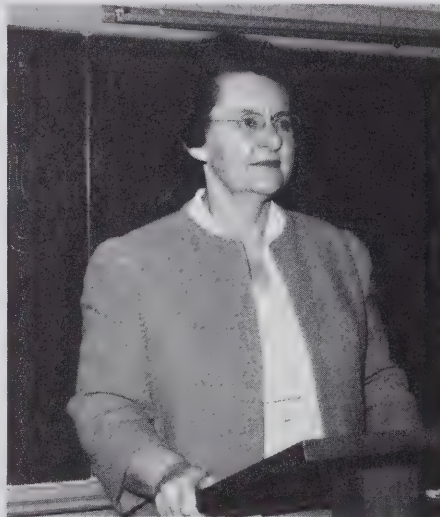

Senior English classes re-study

Miss Lucille Edwards, B.A. Miss Edwards, who teaches senior English, spends much time instructing her students in composition and introducing them to literature ranging from the Old Testament to the modern poets. She enjoys traveling in the summer.

Miss Elizabeth B. Kapp, B.A. As new head of the English Department, Miss Kapp has assumed many additional responsibilities. Yet she still has time to lead juniors through the realm of Emerson and Thoreau.

Mrs. Evelyn Garrison, B.A., M.E. Teaching public speaking and sophomore English keeps Mrs. Garrison busy. She, however, can always find time to give advice to students individually and to coach the debating teams.

Directed by Miss Kapp, the English Department seeks to provide an interesting and comprehensive curriculum for students through grades ten to twelve. Literature, grammar, and composition, basic components of the English study, are expanded into various branches both beneficial and enjoyable to pupils. English, the one course required through high school, offers the student an opportunity to increase his ability to use the language and to see the excellence with which it has been used before in great world literature.

Mr. Jack Tesh, B.A. Formerly a Wake Forest football player, Mr. Tesh may now be found teaching senior English in room 204. Turning from Shakespeare to sports at the end of each school day, he coaches JV football, basketball, and baseball.

Mrs. Marjorie Stephenson, B.A. Mrs. Stephenson serves as a sophomore English teacher, Dean of Girls, and Nurses Room supervisor. Collecting Shakespearean items is her favorite hobby.

Mrs. Janice P. Owings, B.A., M.A. Mrs. Owings teaches sophomore English and journalism. She serves as sponsor for the publications staff and is the guiding force behind the publishing of the annual and papers.

Bible stories in literature

Mrs. Erline Martin, B.A. Mrs. Martin handles a dual role in the English department. Besides her regular senior groups, she teaches the Advanced Placement classes for future English majors. She also finds time to sponsor the National Honor Society.

Miss Lillian Trimble Rhodes, B.A., M.A. Students in both senior English and advanced composition courses are spurred to work by Miss Rhodes' sparkling sense of humor and enthusiasm for her subjects.

Miss Jackie Faye Bullard, B.S. Familiarizing sophomores with SILAS MARNER and English grammar occupies most of Miss Bullard's time. In her spare time she sponsors the Dancing Boots.

Mrs. Jo Stroud, B.A. Mrs. Stroud's friendliness and easy manner help to make her English classes enjoyable. When not instructing her students in the art of grammar and literature, she likes reading and sewing.

Mrs. Cecile Harriman, B.A., M.E. After each year of teaching American literature and grammar, Mrs. Harriman enjoys a trip to the mountains or the beach.

Mrs. Carol Watterson, B.S. Mrs. Watterson, an English teacher, enjoys reading Shakespeare's plays, listening to music, and cooking.

Math teachers attend refresher workshops

Reynolds' math department offers a wide variety of study levels to interested students. Commercial math, Algebras I, II, and III, and geometry are on the curriculum, as well as trigonometry, solid geometry, and the more advanced maths. Pupils who excel beyond these levels are offered Advanced Placement, taught by Mr. Baumgardner, which counts for a varying number of required math hours in college.

Mrs. Katherine Reich, B.A. Mrs. Reich's enthusiasm helps to make math more interesting for her students. She also serves as advisor to the Student Council.

Mrs. Mildred Rash, B.A. Teaching math at Reynolds for the last three years has been an enjoyable experience for Mrs. Rash. In her spare time she serves as the Junior Red Cross sponsor, plays bridge, and enjoys reading.

Mr. Charles Baumgardner, B.A. Mr. Baumgardner, whose interests range from water-skiing, to singing, and travel, feels his greatest love is teaching contemporary mathematics to high school students. He also enjoys Reynolds and UNC sports activities.

Miss Linda Farrar, B.A. Miss Farrar is not only a geometry and Algebra II teacher, but also is co-advisor of the Student Council. She likes people, bridge, and spectator sports.

Mrs. Mary Compton, B.S. When not teaching math, Mrs. Compton finds time to sponsor the junior class and to attend many athletic functions of the school. Some of her outside interests are bridge and folk music.

Mrs. Lucinda Moser, B.A. Although her advanced math and Algebra III classes take up most of her time, Mrs. Moser still finds time to knit and work in her garden.

Mrs. Caroline Spencer, B.S. Mrs. Spencer teaches geometry and Algebra II. She is also responsible for the bookroom which contains over a thousand books. She checks out books to teachers in the fall and collects them in the spring.

Business prepares students for outside world

Mr. William S. Bingham, B.S., M.A. Business Arithmetic, geometry, and Algebra II, essential to the development of logical thinking, are taught by Mr. Bingham. An avid sports fan, he enjoys basketball, football, and baseball.

Mrs. Nancy White, B.A. With a keen sense of humor Mrs. White helps her algebra and geometry students learn their math. After school she advises the House Court.

Typing, shorthand, bookkeeping, business English, and law are offered in the business department to students interested in pursuing business careers or in broadening their scope of subject matter in preparation for college. The student often finds that high school typing is beneficial to him throughout life, whether he plans to attend college or business school. He may also find that the outside world always has room for new people, especially those trained, as he has been, from the high school level up in business.

Mrs. Clara FitzHugh, B.S., M.E. While teaching bookkeeping, typing, and other business courses, Mrs. FitzHugh has obtained a close relationship with her students, to whom she devotes a great deal of time.

Mrs. Hazel Mitchell, B.A., M.E. Mrs. Mitchell, who teaches typing and shorthand, is a newly-wed whose interest is in listening to her husband's records. She loves to travel and annually chaperones the AP trip to New York.

Mrs. Sarah Angel, B.A. After teaching D.E. and marketing and supervising the club's activities, Mrs. Angel finds that her schedule leaves a little time for the interior decoration of her new home.

Mrs. Linda Cook, B.A. Although Mrs. Cooke enjoys teaching math, many of her interests lie outside of the classroom. She takes time to work with needlepoint and to help her husband raise tropical fish.

Mrs. Louise Still, B.A. Besides teaching typing and shorthand, Mrs. Still is a member of both a garden club and a bridge club. She also enjoys spending time with her four children.

Science Club organized

Mr. Ronald L. Goins, B.S. Swimming plays a large part in the life of Mr. Goins. Along with his job of teaching biology to sophomores, he coaches the swimming team and gives instruction in water safety during the summer.

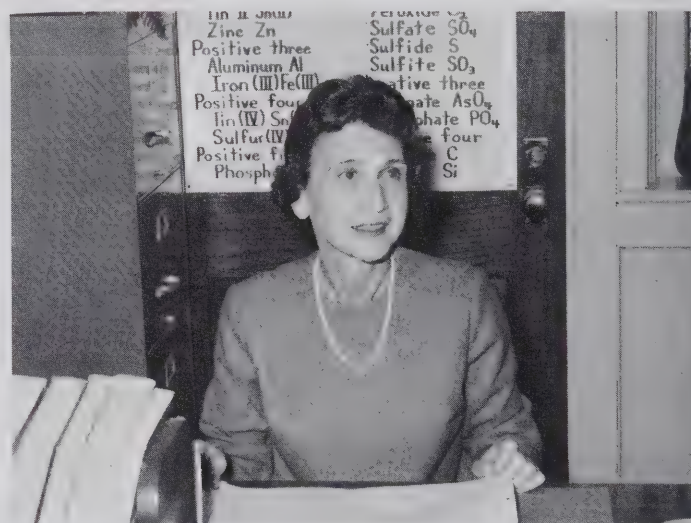

Mrs. Norma McMurry, B.S. Laughter is not uncommon in Mrs. McMurry's algebra and chemistry classes, for she adds humor to the subjects she teaches. During the Wake Forest football season, she enjoys watching her husband Don play.

Mr. Joe Strickland, B.A. Mr. Strickland uses his pleasing personality to make biology and German interesting for his students. He also serves as co-sponsor of the Key Club.

Approximately 49 students took part in the two advanced placement science courses, biology and chemistry, taught by Mrs. Steelman and Mr. Wilson, respectively. Miss Mataline Collette is head of the science department. This year Mrs. Katherine Renn offered her talents as a psychology teacher for the first time at Reynolds. Newly organized at Reynolds this year was the Science Club, an extension of the department, sponsored by Mr. Wilson.

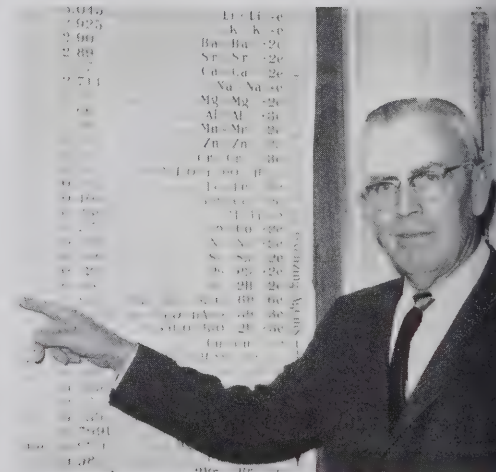

Miss Mataline Collette B.A., M.E. Although kept busy by her chemistry classes and duties as head of the science department, Miss Collette relaxes by playing bridge and keeping abreast of the ever-changing world of sciences through enrichment courses.

Mrs. Catherine Steelman, B.S., M.E. Mrs. Steelman, teaching first year and Advanced Placement biology, serves as co-sponsor of the National Honor Society.

Mr. William Webster, B.S., M.E. When not teaching biology to Reynolds sophomores, Mr. Webster enjoys traveling. He serves as coach for the varsity basketball team.

Mr. Harry Wilson, B.A. When summer halts his regular and Advanced Placement chemistry classes, Mr. Wilson experiments with color photography. He most recently spent his summer as assistant safety supervisor at the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy District in Ohio.

to expand department

Mr. Rodney Williams, B.S. Mr. Williams, taking time out from his physics classes, advises members of the Key Club on school projects and chapel skits.

Mrs. Kathryn Renn, B.A. Mrs. Renn makes her psychology classes a learning experience by involving her students in community projects. Outside the classroom she enjoys bridge, collecting books and records, and traveling.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hamrick. In her first year at Reynolds, Mrs. Hamrick heads the Language Lab. She enjoys knitting and cooking during her after-school hours, and traveling in the summer.

Mrs. Anne Safrit, B.S. During vacations and after school, Mrs. Safrit enjoys playing the guitar, singing, and helping her husband re-finish furniture.

Mrs. Elizabeth Roddy, B.S. When not guiding sophomore and junior girls through physical education, Mrs. Roddy enjoys horseback riding. She was a student teacher at Reynolds and then returned as a regular member of the faculty.

“Let’s see,” he mumbled, “burnt toast and strong tea for acids, and mustard and water for alkali. Or is it the other way around?”

This does not sound like the normal jargon of a student in physical education class. But this junior was taking a course in medical self-help training offered by the physical education class.

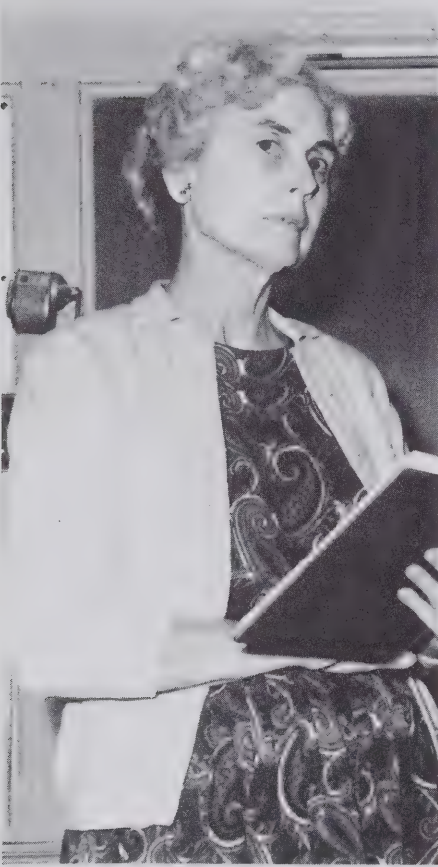

Mr. Douglas Crater, B.S., M.A. Mr. Crater teaches physical education and coaches wrestling at Reynolds. He plays golf in his spare time.

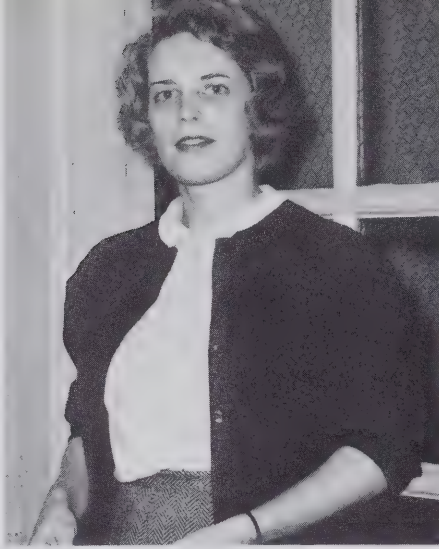

Mr. Herman Bryson, B.S., M.A. In addition to being head football coach of the 4-A champions, Mr. Bryson received two “Coach of the Year” awards. Teaching boys’ gym classes and playing golf keep him busy.

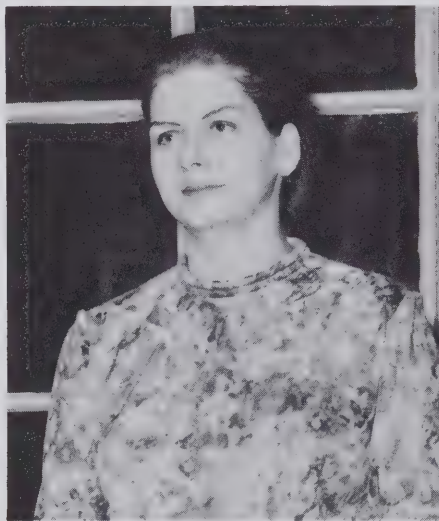

Mrs. Margaret McDermott, B.A., M.E. When not teaching all four years of Latin to Reynolds students, Mrs. McDermott serves as senior class sponsor. She enjoys reading and traveling.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mount, B.A. Mrs. Mount devotes many hours to enriching her students' appreciation of French. She sponsors the French National Honor Society, the French Club, and holds a weekly seminar. Her interests include tennis and horseback riding.

Mrs. Sherry Winstead, B.A. In her first year at Reynolds, Mrs. Winstead finds visual aids a help in teaching Spanish. Her outside activities include serving as advisor to the Spanish Club and to the Sophomore Y-Teens.

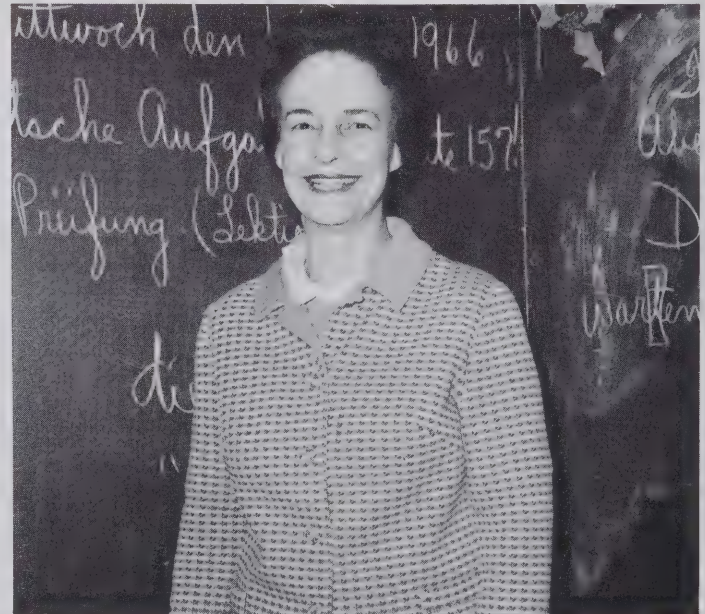

Miss Mayme Williams, B.A., B.S. Although new at Reynolds, Miss Williams, Spanish and French teacher, has entered into the spirit of the school by sponsoring the Serviteers.

Clubs explore native traditions

Under the direction of Mrs. Margaret McDermott, the language department was active this year. After-school meetings were held by clubs for each of the four languages taught at Reynolds—French, German, Latin, and Spanish—and three of these clubs held annual banquets with food and entertainment from their native countries.

Mrs. Janie Donaldson, B.A. When not preparing for her French II classes or serving as co-sponsor of the French Club, Mrs. Donaldson enjoys music, knitting, and playing bridge.

Mrs. Aileen Hepler, B.A., M.A.T. Aside from teaching German, Mrs. Hepler has the most unusual hobby of making bridesmaid's veils. She hopes to re-visit Germany where she has spent many summers.

Mrs. Hortensia Villalon. When not teaching Spanish, Mrs. Villalon fills her spare time with knitting, reading Agatha Christie mysteries, listening to classical music, and tending to numerous stray animals which find a haven at her home.

Mrs. Margaret Hamrick, B.A. In her third year of teaching at Reynolds, Mrs. Hamrick teaches two years of Latin and sponsors the Latin Club. In her spare time she enjoys reading and knitting.

Lab offers practice in speaking

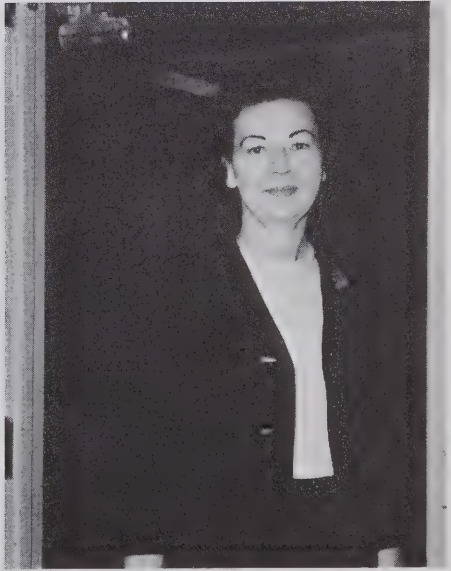

This year a new system was initiated at Reynolds in which two aides controlled the large study halls, 220 and 222. Lightening the work of the regular teachers, Mrs. Bumgardner and Mrs. Haring were each in charge of classrooms containing approximately 70 students for most of the day. They worked in the office the remainder of the time.

Mrs. Sandra Adams, B.A. Sophomore English students enjoy being in Mrs. Adams' class because she is their friend as well as their teacher. When not teaching she enjoys playing bridge, reading, and cheering her husband's basketball team.

Mrs. Katherine Bumgardner. Mrs. Katherine Bumgardner has a dual role at Reynolds. During most of the day she conducts a study hall in room 220. For the remainder of her time at school, she works in the office.

Mrs. Haring. Making a study hall a place in which to study is a demanding job. Mrs. Haring handles that job and her numerous office duties well.

Advanced Placement classes attend seminars

Geography was taught for the first time this year by Mrs. Joanne Raulerson. Students wishing to take history in their senior year were offered a special course, World History IA. Mr. Philip Ashley joined the faculty this year as a sophomore world history teacher. Advanced placement history instructor, Mr. McLean Mitchell, chaperoned his classes for a week's stay in New York City during the Easter holidays.

Mr. McLean Mitchell, B.S., M.A. Mr. Mitchell has returned to Reynolds to teach AP and senior European history after having been a John Hay Fellow at Columbia last year. His hobbies include collecting books and records, and traveling.

Mrs. Hazel Flack, B.A. Mrs. Flack, who likes to knit and sew for her two young daughters, teaches U.S. history and government. She also sponsors the House of Representatives.

Mr. Don Kelly, B.A., M.A. Mr. Kelly enjoys teaching United States history at Reynolds. He spends his free time skiing, scuba diving, and coaching football, wrestling, and track.

Mrs. Mary Pearce, B.A. When not teaching world and American history at Reynolds, Mrs. Pearce finds time to serve as a PTA officer.

Mrs. Joann Raulerson, B.A. Although teaching world history and geography takes up much of her time, Mrs. Raulerson enjoys reading and horseback riding.

Miss Annie Graham Caldwell, B.A., B.S. Combining American history and sports may be hard for some, but not for Miss Caldwell. Aside from conducting her classes, she sponsors the Pep Board and cheerleaders, and makes "beat-em" tags for students.

Mr. Charles Ragland, B.A. Mr. Ragland sometimes surprises his economics and history students with the fact that he was once a mortician. Authorities rate his coin collection as one of the best in the country.

Mr. Philip Ashley, B.S. Mr. Ashley, in his first year at Reynolds, teaches world history and psychology. A sports enthusiast, he participates in golf and tennis in his spare time.

Drivers Education teaches safety rules

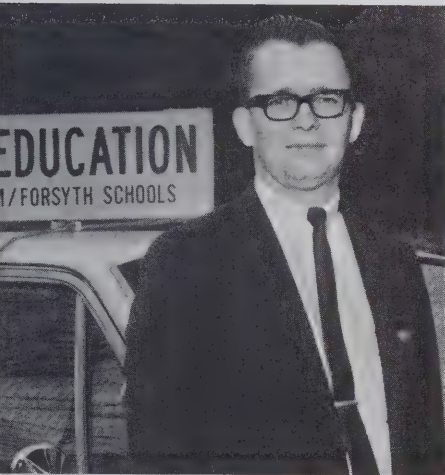

Mr. Michael Pelech, B.A. When not braving the rigors of traffic while teaching drivers education to Reynolds students, Mr. Pelech serves the school as auditorium manager.

Mr. Bob Cox, B.A. With patience, enthusiasm, and a cheerful disposition, Mr. Cox teaches students how to drive defensively. After school he coaches the boys' varsity football, basketball, and baseball teams.

"But I cannot do a road turn. This road is just too narrow!" she moaned. However, after several attempts and many "That is much better"s from the instructor, she realized that she could. The purpose of the drivers education classes this year was not only to teach the students rules of driving, but also to instill confidence in the new drivers.

In a world filled with calipers, micrometers, and blue prints, Mr. Driver and Mr. Sugg taught their machine shop and mechanical drawing and woodworking classes the intricacies of the industrial arts. Many students comprising several classes found this an answer to their immediate needs.

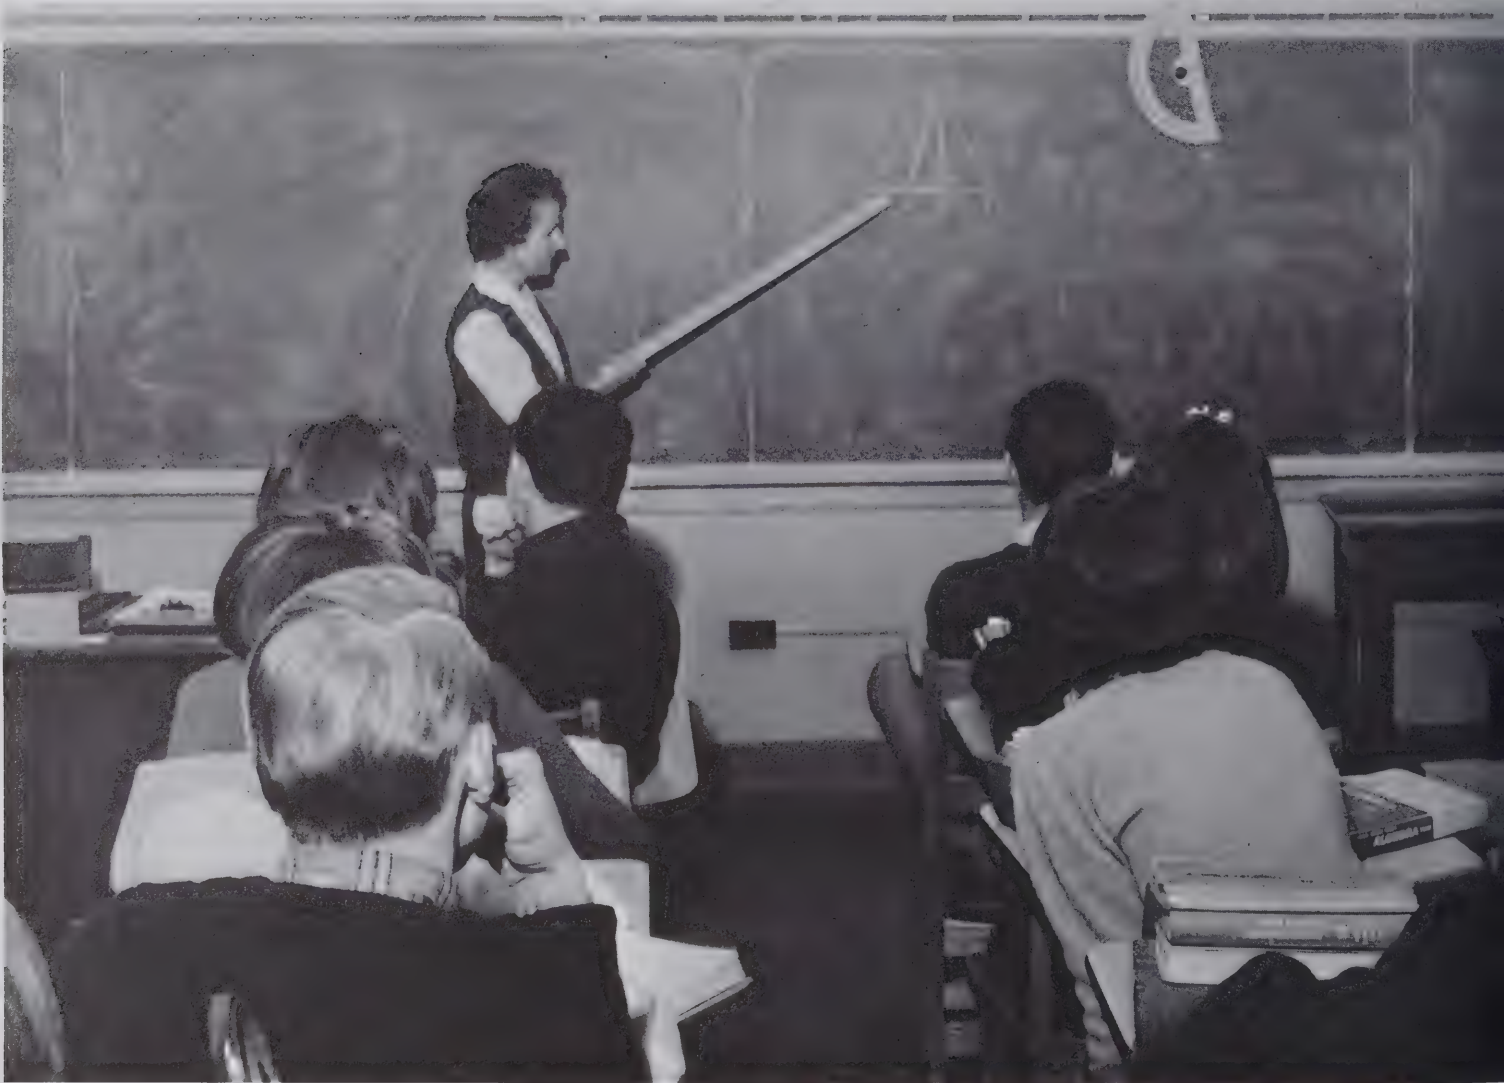

Mr. Gurney Johnson, B.A., M.A. Mr. Johnson emphasizes safety restrictions and principles when teaching the compulsory in-car phase of drivers education to Reynolds students.

Mr. Edward Sugg, B.S. Mr. Sugg, mechanical drawing and woodworking instructor, enjoys flying radio-control model airplanes and operating a ham radio in his spare time. During the summer, he relaxes by swimming and playing golf.

Mr. Jack Driver. Instructing students in the intricacies of the machine shop takes up much of Mr. Driver's time. When not teaching, he enjoys fishing and playing golf.

Reynolds students form

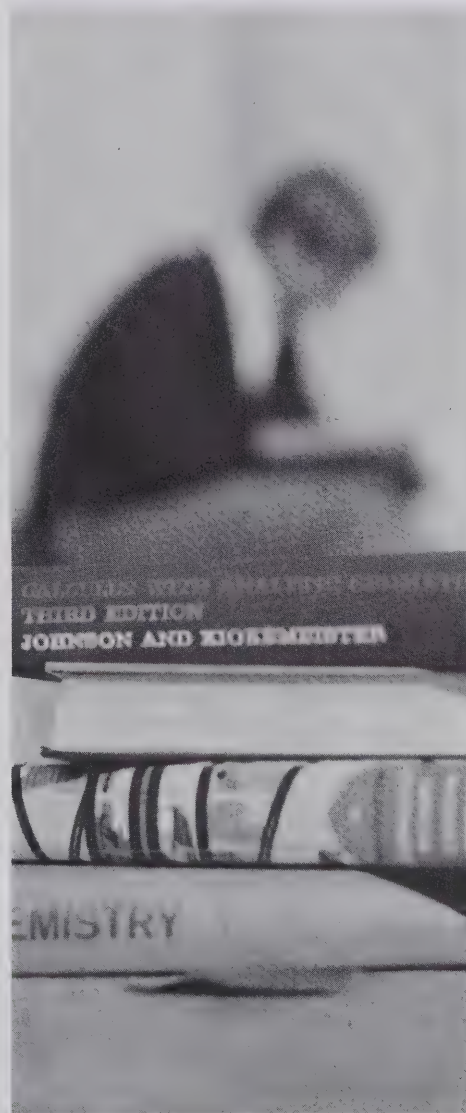

their Heritage now

through

Classes

The high school student faces a difficult task. He is required to swallow large doses of knowledge, experience, wisdom, and maturity in only three short years. When he enters high school as a bewildered sophomore, he encounters new people and new experiences to which he must adjust. As he passes through the security of his junior year into the superiority of his senior year, he learns to live in his world, preparing himself for the world he will face after graduation. He learns to differentiate between knowledge and wisdom, even though he may gain little of either. Each year he gains the experiences and knowledge that will help him grow into a wise, mature man.

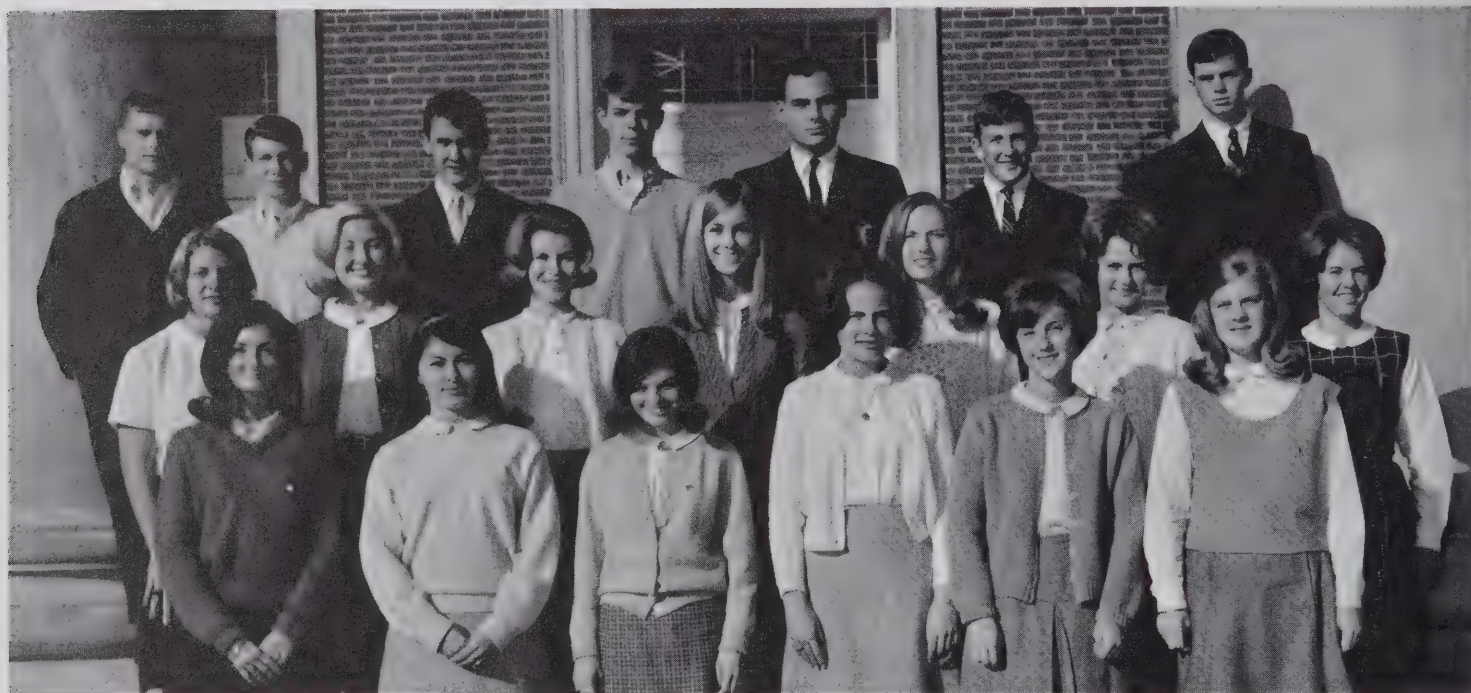

Ken Craven is elected President of Senior Class

Facing graduation in June, we shall not easily shrug off the honor policy we have supported and the learning we have acquired. Memories will remain of spectacles in Victory Hall, the cheer, "Sophomores, Juniors, Seniors," and study halls in rooms 220 and 222.

Next year we shall find ourselves at large universities, small colleges, and jobs. But the urges to visit favorite teachers, attend pep rallies, and reread old text books will draw us back to the school. If we return, we shall grow sad at the unfamiliar groups chatting on the landing; however, we shall be contented as these students carry on the Reynolds tradition of hard work and great determination.

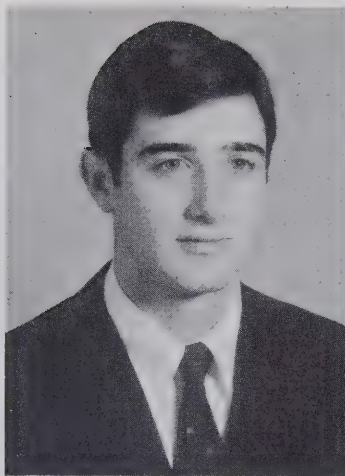

Senior Class officers for 1966-1967 are Ken Craven, pres.; Jim Richardson, v-pres.; Amy Johnson, sec.; J.C. Woodall, treas.

The Senior Executive Committee members managed all Senior Class business. First Row: M. Anderson, K. Glass, V. Wadsley, S. Siewers, P. Stockton, S. Rogers. Second Row: B. Pou, G. Efrid, Reynolds' eleven National Merit semi-finalists were Marjorie Anderson, Mary Gray Coughenhour, Jo Mayo, Sharon Clodfelter, Carole Nanzetta, Sharon Deck, Keith Hoots, Windy March, Peter McLean, and Martin Ball.

Seniors excel in creativity and citizenship

Mary Stuart Parker received the DAR
Good Citizen Award.

Jeane Boyles' essay, "What Is an American?" was published in the National Essay Anthology.

On the basis of her work on the publications staff, Sharon Deck, co-editor of the Black and Gold, was selected Journalism Student of the Year.

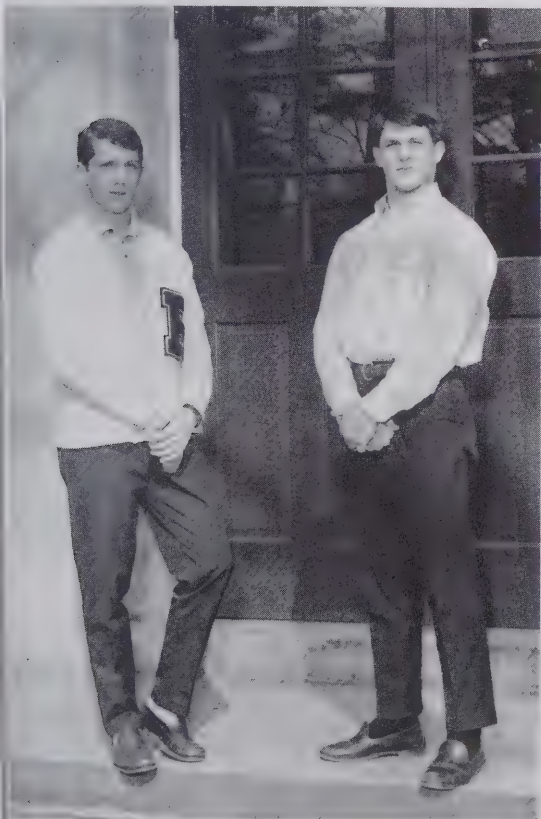

Because of his outstanding leadership ability, Steve Vasgaard was chosen to attend Boys' State at Wake Forest last summer.

Norwegian exchange student Esben Benestad visited Reynolds this year as the guest of Sam Ausband.

Norwegian student visits RJR; Seniors elect Tim Crater mascot

Last summer nine attended the Governor's School in eight areas. These seniors were Sharon Deck, Patsy Johnson, Mary Stuart Parker, Jo Mayo, Keith Hoots, Don Hammer, Allen Gwyn, Dinah Gwin, and Carolyn Simpson.

Don Hammer and Allen Gwyn were the Reynolds nominees for the coveted Morehead Scholarship.

Tim Crater, young son of Coach Doug Crater, was elected Senior Class mascot.

Seniors choose class superlatives in homeroom elections

Because of their ability to keep their classmates laughing, Gwyn Raker and Ann Parrish were elected Wittiest.

Most Popular, Ken Craven and Debbie Disher, display the ability to get along well with everyone.

Scholastic excellence and an appreciation of learning helped make Sharon Clodfelter and Keith Hoots the Most Intellectual.

Outstanding students receive recognition from their peers

Lynda King and Larry Laxton were elected by the seniors as Best Looking.

The seniors agree that intelligence and leadership make Ed Dobbs and Amy Johnson the Most Likely to Succeed.

Participation in varsity sports qualified Vicki Gilbert and Steve Gibson as Most Athletic.

Superlatives exemplify outstanding qualities

Because of their achievement in every area of school life, Ken Craven and Amy Johnson were elected Best All Around.

Always greeting everyone with a big smile, Kay Lawing and Jim Richardson showed that they were Friendliest.

Juniors assume roles of leadership in many school activities

There is a beginning, a middle, and an end. As Juniors we progressed from our high school beginning as sophomores to Junior status, with our seniority yet to come.

We still had problems. There was much discussion about when we would get our class rings. We crossed our fingers and hoped.

We did a great deal of hoping and wishing when we took college boards and were waiting for our scores to come back, and when we were in Greensboro and about to win the conference championship. There were also many more strenuous moments.

We survived it all and now the last third is approaching.

Many juniors, now old-timers in the band, try to perfect the formations during afternoon practice.

Marshals assist at graduation activities

Twelve junior girls each year have the privilege of serving as marshals at the annual graduation exercises. Contrary to custom in other schools, RJR's marshals are chosen not by grades but by a direct vote of the senior class. Duties of the marshals include ushering and handing out programs at the Class Day and graduation programs. They also escort the seniors onto the stage while the diplomas are awarded.

First Row: Karen Hancock, chief; Margretta Houston, Libby Thornton, Ann Googe, Merlyn Weygandt, Ellen Alsup, asst. chief.

Second Row: Carol Weaver, Molly Barber, Sami Ousley, Mary Ann Todd, Jo Abbott, Judy Jones.

Sophomores enter Reynolds, learn quickly about varied schedules

As we approached RJR in the fall, it seemed an obstacle in our paths. Identical corridors confused us, and we were lost.

Helped by teachers and upperclassmen, we began to find out places: we were upstairs, attempting to outyell everyone else at pep rallies. Academically, we could be found discussing Eliot and Shakespeare; most of us studied the mysteries of life in biology. Our favorite position was embraced by seat belts in driver training.

After school, we each discovered our place in athletics, dramatics, Sophoteers, Boots, and chorus.

It is impossible to select one place and say, "Here we are." We are a part of all of Reynolds, and it of us.

Sophomore class officers are Conrad Baldwin, vice-pres.; Patsy Disher, treas.; Jane Benbow, sec.; and Keith Dull, pres.

Sophomores saw their first Homecoming exhibits and chapel during the fall—the first of many impressive events of their beginning year at RJR.

Jean Staton and Karen Nielson had major parts in the Dramatics Club presentation of Opening Night.

Reynolds students vitalize

their Heritage

through

Activities

For nine years, we went to school for six hours every day, doing few things after school except playing in an occasional basketball game or singing in a chorus program. Then suddenly we arrived at high school, and found more activities than we could possibly enjoy in only five afternoons a week. For the first time we encountered Sophoteers, French Club, cross country, Dramatics Club, hall monitors, and the Senior Service Club. Schoolwork, always the most important aspect of gaining an education, dictated the number of clubs we could join and still retain a respectable grade point average. After having determined just how much time Algebra II and chemistry would take, we chose the activities in which we would participate. Almost every interest or whim we had could find satisfaction in some organized group. Never lacking in some activity to occupy our leisure time, we found that the clubs and organizations added many diverting and worthwhile moments to our sojourn at Reynolds.

Student Council leads school government

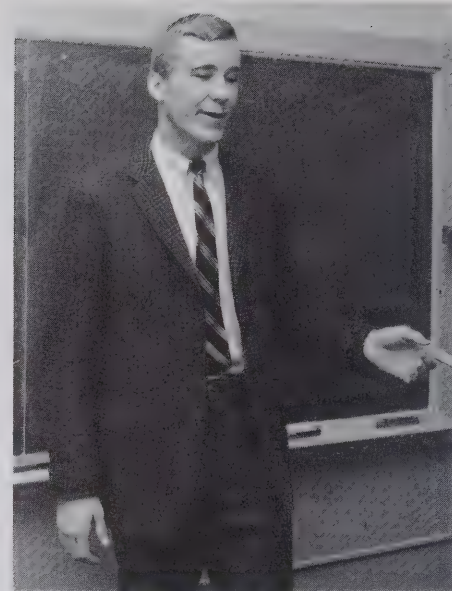

Every Thursday afternoon, the members of the Student Council meet in Mrs. Reich's room. At their meeting, they discuss the cases of any students who have broken the honor code. They also choose an outstanding student for the "Student of the Week" bulletin board on the second floor. The Student Council published the handbook given to each student early in the year.

Representatives from the junior and senior classes are elected by the student body each year, and the sophomore representatives are elected after their first semester.

Each year, the council holds a chapel program to introduce sophomores to the purpose of the council and to show how the group is organized. This year's chapel, as usual, made use of some very laughable skits.

Who could forget that breaking in the lunch line and being discourteous to hall monitors are house court offenses after seeing them dramatized on the stage?

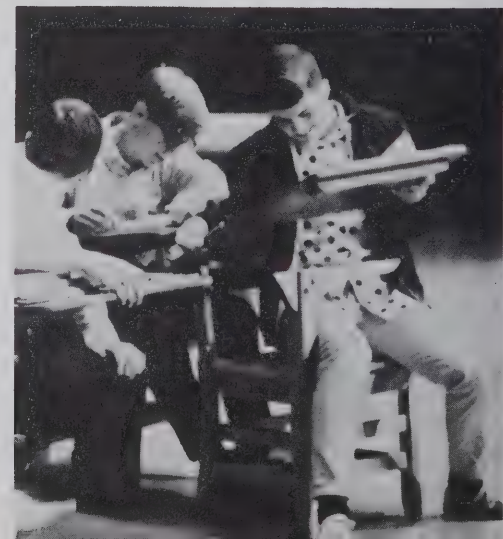

President Steve Vasgaard efficiently managed Student Council affairs during the year.

House Court tries misdemeanors, enforces rules made by House

As Speaker, Ed Dobbs presided over meetings of the House and House Court.

Meeting the second Tuesday of every month, the fifty-eight member House of Representatives strives to improve the school. Five permanent members and a "rotating jury" of four are elected from the House for the House Court, which tries students for misdemeanors. Co-sponsored by Mrs. Flack and Mrs. White, the Court operates under the leadership of the House speaker, speaker pro-tempore, secretary, and treasurer.

Permanent House Court members are Tracy Lounsbury, Ed Dobbs, Don Hammer, Karen Hancock, Beverly Thotterow, Libby Thornton, Nancy Lide, and Mac Crosswell.

Membership

Fifty pairs of eyes watch the gold curtain squeak to the floor. As it touches the floor, pandemonium begins. A few tears, many more laughs, and the congratulatory words of parents drown out the voices calling for candles, robes, and Russian tea. Twice a year, the National Honor Society inducts those students who best exemplify the NHS standards of character, service, leadership, and scholarship. To the juniors and seniors who heard their names called in chapel, induction into the National Honor Society was the reward of years of study and hard work, a visible symbol of achievement.

Speech societies promote interest in debating, public speaking

Debaters can achieve membership in the National Forensic League by accumulating, through a detailed, complicated process, twenty-five points in speaking. Annually, Reynolds has only two or three of its debaters honored by membership, but this year, four were selected. The League's purpose is to provide training in parliamentary procedure and debating. Mrs. Garrison sponsors the group and the officers are Eben Rawls, president; Jule Young, vice-president; and Martin Ball, secretary-treasurer.

National Forensic League members who have been recognized for their skill in debating are Martin Ball, Jule Young, and Eben Rawls.

Masque and Gavel is a national speech honor society. Points for membership can be gained by participation in events such as the recitation and declamation contests, the World Peace speeches, debating, and other speech activities.

Members of Masque and Gavel are Lee Carlton, Eben Rawls, Jule Young, Lynn Isaacs, Bruce Fraser, Molly Barber, and Martin Ball.

RJR's newest honor societies induct outstanding students

Under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Hamrick and Mr. Robert Smith, the National Thespian Honor Society began its first year at Reynolds. Each of the thirteen members was inducted into the society after having earned ten points in either play acting or play production. Thespians from Reynolds signed National Charter 1565 and received membership cards, certificates, and subscriptions to Drama magazine.

Started last year, Modern Music Masters is a national honor society for students who are outstanding in music as well as in academic work. Students who wish to join must have at least a B average in music and participate in a school performing group. Potential members must serve an apprentice period, take a written examination, and audition.

Debate teams argue foreign aid, win many honors

After try-outs are held in late fall to select the top eight debaters who compose RJR's varsity and junior varsity debate teams, research and rehearse become the by-words for the groups. Under the guidance of Mrs. Garrison, they work to improve their presentation of information persuasively. All twenty-seven students who tried out for the varsity team compose the Debate Club, which holds its weekly meetings on Thursday afternoons. The varsity and junior varsity attended the fall conference and debate workshops in Chapel Hill.

Scribblers, Dramatics Clubs produce magazine and plays

The lights in the audience dim and a hush falls over the crowd. Slowly the curtain rises to reveal the cast—not professionals, but members of the Dramatics Club who donate their time and talents during the year not only to acting, but also to painting scenery, designing costumes, setting up props, applying makeup, and managing the stage.

Publishing a magazine of any kind is not easy. Publishing a magazine which you wrote yourself is even harder. Yet members of the Scribblers Club overcame all obstacles to present to the student body their achievement, "The Scribbler." Members found themselves writing and rewriting, collecting material, designing the cover, typing, and attending bimonthly and frequent call meetings.

Pep Board co-chairmen Joyce Meschan and Lynn Isaacs, with the help of Miss Caldwell, supervised the making of bulletin boards and beat 'em tags.

Pep Board and

Reynolds' Pep Board offers many students a chance to participate in the all-important task of keeping the spark of school spirit bright. Under the leadership of Joyce Meschan, Lynn Isaacs, and Miss Caldwell, the members worked all year to boost the Demons with beat em tags, spectaculars, and bulletin boards in every room. The Pep Board planned and executed both the football and basketball homecoming chapels and programs, which were high spots of the school year.

Pep Board Council members are Anne Johnson, Jane Quincannon, Carol Southard, Joyce Meschan, co-chairman; Lynn Isaacs, co-chairman; Elizabeth Foster, Ginny Mann, Chris Leinbach, Becky Gantt, and Bobbe Pou.

cheerleaders boost spirit during athletic events

Cheering loudly, jumping energetically, and wildly waving their shakers, the twelve First Ladies of the sideline, led by Debbie Disher, begin their evening of pep-in-go, keeping the atmosphere lively with refrains of "Boom-Boom, Click-Click" and "Go! Fight! Win!"

Reynolds varsity cheerleaders have always been known for their keen enthusiasm acting as the vital link in unifying the student body with school athletics, and our '66-'67 squad is no exception!

Chief Debbie Disher and assistant chief Judy Perry led the varsity squad and the students at athletic events during the football and basketball seasons.

Varsity cheerleaders Shirley Cox, Molly Barber, Anne Johnson, and Merlyn Weygandt teach students a new cheer at a pep rally.

Majorettes, Boots "Shine" in halftime performances

Beginning early this year, on June 20, sixty-four girls gathered behind the auditorium to start the new season of performances. During the morning and afternoon sessions, by-standers could view high kicks above the heads of curlers and smiles upon the tanned faces. The beginning of school meant the long-awaited first public appearance. With the games that followed, the smiles broadened, the kicks rose, and the steps became co-ordinated. Although the season has ended, the memories linger: practices on the auditorium porch in the rain, white feathers tickling faces, a "dancing trumpet," a Wake Forest halftime performance, and mostly, "Bonanza" with its galloping Dancing Boots.

Color Guard practices with Band, performs at games

Captain Kathy Green led the color guard in their appearances during the football season.

Beginning in the summer, the Color Guard perfected stepping high, carrying the towering flags straight, and doing precision turns. Practice also meant remaining every day for an hour's rehearsal during the week of a game. Their duties included the leading of the band at the pre-game and halftime performances, presenting the American flag during the National Anthem, and marching in all parades and band activities.

cheerleaders boost teams

Being a J.V. cheerleader is not easy; it involves hours of practice for even a simple cheer. A J.V. cheerleader endures the iciness of a frozen football field as well as the heat of a stuffy gym. She suffers from laryngitis often after a game. When the Reynolds scores are low, she supports the team, although the rest of the crowd may be stonily silent. She is the heart of the team.

During football and basketball seasons, the Children's Home cheerleaders and Pep Board supply the team with name cards, make beat 'em tags, and decorate the playing field and a bulletin board outside the office.

Led by the chief, Regina Bowles, the remaining five girls perform cheers at pep rallies, varsity competitions, and girls' athletic contests. Unlike Reynolds Cheerleaders, this group has a sophomore, Betty Plyler, as co-chief.

Key Club erects Christmas tree, sponsors Follies

Beginning in early summer, the Key Clubbers mowed and raked the lawns, spread gravel, marked off the lines on the teachers' parking lots, and painted many of the signs around the school. Soon school began and so did many new Key Club activities. Last year's Bundle Day winners collected again this year as a community project. During the football season, the club sponsored the homecoming dance and made "beat 'em" banners. As the year progressed, Key Clubbers became more engaged with the responsibilities of maintaining their court, presenting both a turkey and humorous skit at the Thanksgiving chapel, and hanging their annual Christmas star on top of Reynolds. This year's sponsors were Mr. Strickland and Mr. Williams.

Senior Service Club presents live "turkey" at Thanksgiving

S.S.C. Indians escort the sacrificial turkey onto the stage during the Thanksgiving chapel.

Throughout the year, the Senior Service Club has improved both the grounds and the spirit at Reynolds. One of their projects was to clear the parking lot of weeds and glass and to straighten the wooden posts. SSC members, under the leadership of president Marc Harris, painted their pool bright red.

Handing out beat 'em tags before games, hanging the "Demon" above the landing, and selling buttons and pennants were part of the SSC's successful efforts to boost school spirit. The SSC skit with live turkey Bob Flintom was one of the highlights of the Thanksgiving chapel. A tall tree, complete with lights, ornaments, and Santa Claus decorated the court at Christmas. The club also gave a Christmas tea for the faculty.

Girls Council deco- rates homerooms with Christmas cards

Founded and sponsored by Miss Janie Weaver, the Girls Council, in its second year, is the newest club at Reynolds. The members, about 40 junior and senior girls, work closely with the administration as well as with the guidance department to serve the school and the community.

One of their main achievements for this school year was setting up a constitution to explain the purpose of the organization and the rules of conduct for the Girls Council. Some of the members took the Betty Crocker test.

Several weeks before Christmas, members of the club made and distributed posters around the school to brighten up the classrooms during the season.

Senior Girls Council members Mary Stuart Parker, Grace Efird, Shelley Roberts, Ginny Mann, Susan Siewers, Peggy Stockton, Bobbe Pou, Kay Lawing, and Patty Pulliam put the finishing touches on their homemade Christmas cards.

The Ushers Club, headed by Key Club President Spunky Burton and S.S.C. President Marc Harris, serves the school by ushering at special programs in Reynolds Auditorium, at PTA meetings, and at other events.

Key Club and S.S.C. members comprise the membership of the club.

Assisted by guidance sponsor, Miss Carol Garrett of the City Recreation Department, the Teenage Council stays busy planning dances with combos such as the Staccatoes and the Prophets, holding a car wash to earn money, and attending Monday-night meetings.

Pine Whispers,

Pine Whispers appears four times a year as a result of a coordinated effort by the departments comprising it. It is conceived and laid out imaginatively within the confines of correct journalistic style. Articles, written and re-written, are stretched or shortened to fit the spaces they must occupy. The staff rushes to complete the paper, keeping a wary eye on the deadline. Pine

Photographer Guy York discusses the November Pine Whispers with staff members Molly Levin, Carolyn Stearns, and David Dalton.

Black and Gold chronicle events of school year

Whispers, a full report of news and achievement at Reynolds, is vital to school life because it is produced by journalism students for the pleasure and benefit of their fellows.

To capture the memories of an entire year in the 208 pages of the 1967 Black and Gold requires cutting, stretching, and squeezing hundreds of pictures and thousands of words into limited space. But to the staff, the memories of long hours of alphabetizing names, cropping pictures, and changing lay-outs almost vanished when the proofs, and later the finished books, returned. The privilege of documenting an exciting year and the challenge of working in an involved project far overshadowed the hard work.

Summer and after-school practices added

Drum major Alan Jones and special twirler Shere Ader lead the band to the end zone for the pre-game ceremonies.

Playing in the marching band is usually an out-of-doors job. Who feels the cold at a football game more than the band members, whose icy fingers must play passages difficult enough in a warm bandroom? Sophomore initiation brought threats of Elmer's Glue in the shoe polish, and a very memorable bus ride to Lexington.

No band member will forget the rainy football game when most of the band members left, and only a dozen remained on the bandstand, sharing a big umbrella. Everyone looked forward to the new uniforms—and handsome uniforms they are—black pants with white stripes and black coats which convert to concert tuxedos. Despite bad reeds and sticking valves, belonging to the band was well worthwhile.

Strains of "Batman" float through Bowman Gray Stadium as the band forms one of their excellent formations.

The band at chapel is an accepted tradition at Reynolds and adds life to pep rallies and chapels. Under the direction of Mr. Robert Smith, the band performs not only for its fellow students, but also in the State Band Contest, for clubs, and in school concerts.

Choruses exchange with Leaksville for programs

At Reynolds this year, the chorus has expanded into four distinct groups. The 100-member Mixed Chorus, in addition to performing regular fall, Christmas, and spring concerts, visited Morehead High School in Leaksville on January 27 for an exchange concert—a first for the Reynolds

Chorus. Morehead returned the visit a week later. This year, for the first time in many years, Reynolds has had a performing Boys Chorus. The boys sang at the fall concert and at the State Music Contest in March along with the Mixed and Girls Choruses. The Girls Ensemble, a select group of twelve voices, performed twice at Christmas for public organizations. They attended the Western Solo and Ensemble Contest at Davidson College in February, along with a number of soloists. In the spring, another group of chosen students attended the two-day All-State Choral Festival.

Spanish and Latin Clubs hold annual banquets in spring

Starting their year of fun and service with a turkey race at the Thanksgiving chapel program, the Spanish Club held meetings in the cafeteria on pre-selected dates. This year for the first time, the various classroom Spanish clubs consolidated under the leadership of Mrs. Hortensia Villalon.

At first glance, they were a group of Roman citizens sitting down to a meal of boiled jellyfish. With a second look, however, "Cannon Mills" could be read on the bed-sheet togas, and the jellyfish became lime jello. They were not Romans, but members at the annual Latin Club banquet.

Language clubs add foreign accent to school life

The French Club, sponsored by Mrs. Mount, has done many new things this year. At the after-school meetings, the members enjoyed pastries and delicacies, such as goose liver. The club gave a play entitled Le Petit Prince at the spring banquet and sold balloons at the March of Dimes carnival.

The German Club, the only language club continuing to meet in the classes, has had an active year. In the Thanksgiving chapel, the club brought Snoopy and his Sopwith Camel to the auditorium stage in an entertaining skit. Many German students plan to enrich their knowledge of the language by studying in Europe this summer.

Clothes drive highlights year for Sophoteers

Sophoteers, a service organization sponsored by Mrs. Marjorie Stephenson, helps sophomore girls accomplish the often difficult transition to senior high school; it also offers them a chance to give of themselves to their school.

Selling Black and Gold tickets has always been a favorite project of the Sophoteers; the girls frequently surpass other clubs in total sales.

Debbie Deter, Christi Harrison, Martha Foltz, Mrs. Stephenson, and Vicki Remishofsky discuss plans for an upcoming Sophoteers meeting.

Nancy Thrasher, Anne Womble, Sally Rider, Debbie Meadows, and Patti McCollum sort clothes collected during the clothing drive sponsored by the Sophoteers.

Serviteers act as hostesses for many school banquets

To serve Reynolds High School became the goal of over one hundred junior girls who attended an organizational meeting of the Serviteers in November. Immediately after the meeting, the club, sponsored by Miss Williams, collected used clothing to be distributed among less fortunate families in Winston-Salem. At Thanksgiving they helped to gather food for the same purpose. The club also served dinner to 170 members of the Forsyth County PTA council and operated a "Magic Box" at the March of Dimes Carnival.

Serviteers Judy Gold, Judy White, Eloise Orr, and Marcia Dalby decorate a box for the annual clothing drive.

Hi-Y provides wholesome activities for boys

Reynolds' sophomore, junior and senior Hi-Y's have had a very active year, both in social and service activities. The three groups acted jointly in clothing and food drives during the Christmas season. Group parties have been held in various members' houses.

Sophomore Hi-Y executives recently participated in an area meeting. Junior Hi-Y members have engaged such speakers as Chief of Police Tucker to augment their regular meetings.

Senior Hi-Y members have had an extremely active and successful half-year. Of special note is their second place in the Hi-Y senior basketball tournament. Their trophy is on display in the school trophy case.

Lana Thompson, Julia Reaves, Ginny Mann, and Susan Siewers stack doughnuts before the Senior Y-Teen doughnut sale.

The Y-Teens, a girls' service organization sponsored by the YWCA, again created one of the highlights of the year in their annual Christmas dance. A joint effort of all three Y-Teen groups, the dance featured the music of the Staccatoes. The individual organizations also held bake sales, doughnut sales, and other fund-raising drives throughout the year.

Sophomore Y-Teen officers are M. Kelly, 2nd v-pres.; D. Meadows, treas.; G. Berryhill, sec.; J. Benbow, pres.; S.J. Witherow, 1st v-pres.

Campus Life, Young Life provide spiritual emphasis

The Campus Life and Young Life clubs at Reynolds stress the spiritual aspects of student life and emphasize religion as a basis for a sound life. Campus life functions as part of the local Youth for Christ organization. Members hold prayer breakfasts and quiz and sing at YFC rallies, in addition to the regular school meetings. Young Life members meet regularly on Wednesday nights at the homes of different members. Headed by President Bob Rhode, the club discusses contemporary problems. Chess members perfect their game; Health Club hears speakers

Although the Chess Club meets formally only once a week, the members congregate after lunch each day to play chess in the hall. The Chess Club held tournaments against other schools this year. At their meetings, they taught new members of the club to play chess and studied tactics of famous chess games from magazines.

About twenty Reynolds students who shared an interest in health careers made up this year's Health Careers Club. Members invited speakers to the club, took field trips, and saw special movies. Reynolds strengthens her Heritage

through

Athletics

A dense gloom engulfed the sullen crowd in the gym. Defeat seemed imminent. But then, through a combination of luck and skill, the Demons pulled away from their opponents and achieved the small margin of victory they needed.

A familiar sight this year has been that of one of Reynolds' many athletic teams defeating their tough, talented opponents. Football, wrestling, basketball, swimming—practically every sport recorded a winning season.

Victory is, of course, the goal of athletic competition. The Reynolds teams have achieved many victories this year. But they have also gained the other benefits of athletics—well-trained bodies, the camaraderie of their teammates, and a respect for the abilities of others. These gains are perhaps more important than even the trophies.

Varsity grabs early 4-A lead

Referees signal a touchdown for the Reynolds Demons during the West game. Reynolds defeated West, 31-0.

Bouncing back for a spectacular year on the gridiron, Reynolds' Demons carried away the Central 4-A Championship.

Fresh talent combined with the experienced second-year men added speech and strength to the new I formation.

Like the well-oiled workings of a machine, the varsity demonstrated their capabilities as a team throughout the season. A tally of the year showed that the Demons had scored 220 points against the opposition's 41. Out of ten games, six were complete shutouts, two were regularly scored games, one tie, and the varsity suffered only one loss!

Managers Russell Trivison, Huck Robinson, Paul Sawyer, and Tom Johnson take care of equipment, taping, and first aid for the football team.

Quarterback Jim Correll executes a pass play in the High Point-Reynolds football game. Moving to assistance in the backfield are Glenn Alspaugh, 13; John Goins, 36; and Mike Cox, 33. Reynolds smeared High Point 21-0 at Bowman Gray Stadium.

REYNOLDS 0—BROUGHTON 21

A hard-fought season ended as Broughton put the clamps on Reynolds' hopes for the Regionals.

Reynolds football coaches deserve a great deal of praise for the part they played in making the '66 football season such a great one. The football players certainly appreciate the coaches—they showed that when they lifted

Coach Bryson into the air after Reynolds defeated Grimsley to become Conference champions. Just plain hard work is a part of a coach's job. This year the coaches well earned their standing ovations and slaps on the back.

The "Three Big C's"—Correll, Cox, and Crews—combined their efforts to make an impressive year on the field.

Hard-fighting finishes season

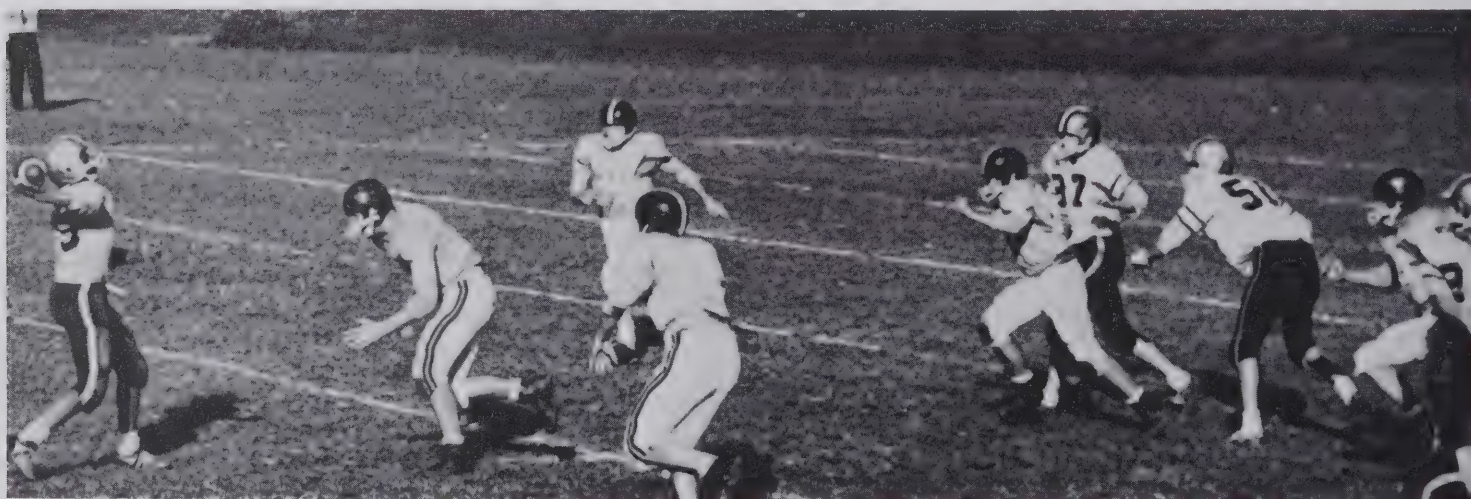

Reynolds' junior varsity Demons finished their season with a 4-5 final record, slightly behind the varsity. The inexperienced team, lacking the polish of their opponents, put up a terrific battle against all oncomers. Coaches Bob Cox and Jack Tesh applied all their knowledge to the team in an effort to co-ordinate the spirited boys into an effective football machine. Taking advantage of the enthusiasm, the coaches smoothed out the rough edges and shaped the team into a well-knit squad.

Among the problems the team faced were inexperience, lack of size, and abundant injuries. Even though these problems occurred frequently, the J.V.'s handled them well. They constantly showed their ability in their away games and, though sometimes thrown for losses, they returned with undampened spirit to battle on.

After a year on the grid, the J.V.'s earned scores that indicate a promising future. New size and speed will add to the power of the team; those good enough will supply the varsity with the punch and power necessary for victory.

Demon cagers

Reynolds' five giants of the court battled their way through twenty tough games this season. Quarterback Danny Walker led his team during a victorious season that ended 20-5.

Sophomore Dan Traylor, tallest member of the team, spent much of the season on the bench with strained ligaments in the foot. Even with this handicap, the Demons continued their season with fast-paced action and hot scoring.

Switching the defense often threw the opponents off course. A change from man-to-man, to zone, to a full court press helped in keeping the opposition's scoring to a minimum. Coach Bill Webster helped the team with their double pivot offense which has earned them two thirds of the games won.

Key rebounders Chuck Swan-nack and Holt Trotman supplied the action under the basket during center Traylor's absence. Outside shots remained in the territory of sharpshooters Melvin Pearce, Wayne McGee, and Rich-ard Bailey. Sophomore Larry "Weasel" Little exhibited his pro-mising form during the last of the season, much to the joy of the fans.

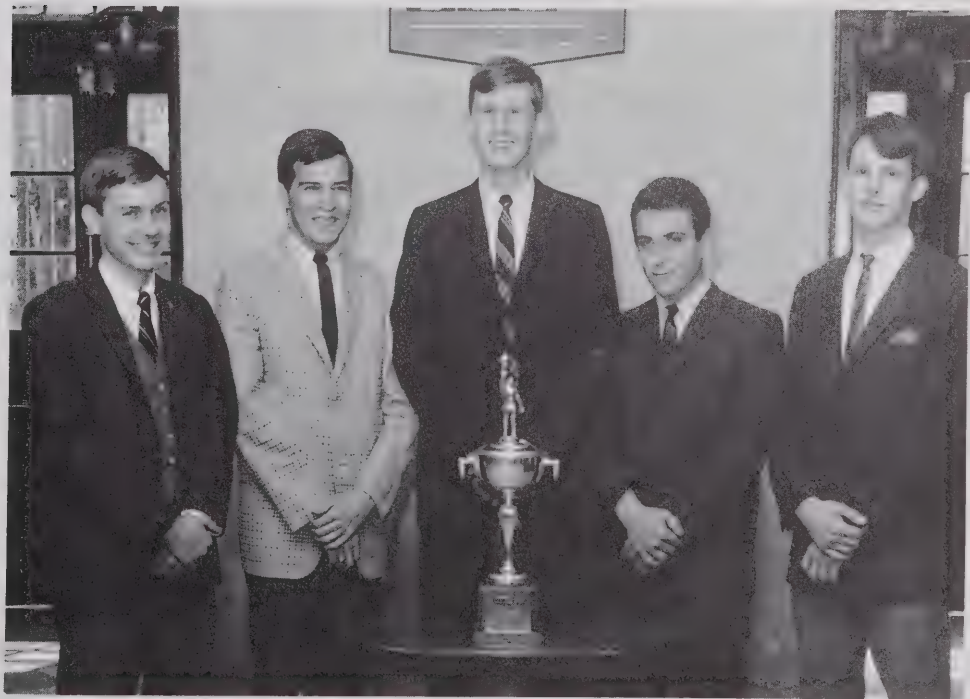

Top Demon point man is Danny Walker with an excess of 125 points although high scorer is Dan Traylor with a 12-point-per-game average.

Varsity basketball coaches Mr. Bob Cox, Mr. Jack Tesh, and head coach Mr. Bill Webster led the 1967 Demons into the state tournament.

practice bring

This year many exciting basketball games have taken place in the preliminary clashes between the Junior Varsities. By arriving at 6:30 p.m., Reynolds fans had a chance to see the Demon cage stars of the future.

This season's J.V.'s followed the tradition of years past in supplying the spectators with many heart-stopping moments. One of the most exciting occurred when the Junior Varsity took on Parkland. The teams played two overtimes before the Mustangs emerged victorious on a last-second shot.

Coached by Mr. Jack Tesh, the J.V. team gained valuable experience for next year when they will have a chance to try out for the Varsity basketball team.

Many of these talented sophomores were outstanding at one time during the campaign, but the most consistent players throughout the season were soaring center, Curtis Little; aggressive forward, Russell Perry; sharp-shooting Larry Amaker; play-maker Tim Shoaf; and high-scoring Sam Kimel. Perry, Little, and Kimel scored in double figures in the majority of the games.

All considered, the Junior Varsity had a very successful season, and will be counted on to fill the places left by the six seniors on this year's varsity.

Wrestlers earn top seasonal record

Wrestling is not one of the most graceful sports offered to Reynolds' athletic-minded student. Wrestling is hard, sweaty, racking work. Weight training is almost a prerequisite. But strength is only a basis; knowledge is the real key to good wrestling. There are over 200 moves in wrestling. A good wrestler must know as many as he can learn and be able to use them when a split-second opportunity presents itself.

Reynolds' wrestling team did a fine job this year winning 10 out of 14 matches.

Demon swimmers stroke off a good year

The highlight of the season for the swimming team, headed by tri-captains Peter McLean, Phil Stewart, and Jim Richardson, was the team's winning a high place in a Southeastern regional swimming meet in Atlanta. The team, coached by Ron Goins, consistently defeated its 4-A opponents. Through practice at the local YW CA, the team developed strength in every event.

Cross-country runners build speed for victories

Among the most dedicated athletes are those who participate in cross country meets. Spectators are few in number, with a limited amount of publicity for this sport. Mr. Ronald Goins, who coaches these contestants, drills his team into fine condition each week. This year, Reynolds competed against such schools as East, Parkland, Greensboro Grimley, and Page. Requirements for a letter in cross country are based upon the coaches' decision (usually the top eight runners).

Reynolds track team works for success

Hard work and determination have paid great dividends to this year's track team. Led by Coach Don Kelly, the Demon striders flashed to wins in their first three dual meets. From there, they went on to win the city-county championship, and to finish high in the Central 4-A conference and state meets. Although some of the best performances were turned in by seniors, the majority of the winners were sophomores and juniors, who will return next year to pace the cindermen to greater wins.

Spring brings early practice

For many athletes, March brings the sharp crack of a base hit. Over fifty hopeful baseball players invade Hanes Park at the first glimpse of a sun ray. Coached by Mr. Bob Cox, the top twenty players are selected to represent Reynolds in the 4-A Conference. The team is drilled in batting, fielding, sliding, and other fundamental phases of this national sport as preparation begins to uphold the winning tradition of R.J.R. High School.

Team effort results in good baseball season

Backed by the defensive play of Ken Craven at third base and Wayne McGee at shortstop, the RJR baseball team gave their opponents a rough challenge in scoring. Several top-notch hurlers played key roles in limiting the number of runs scored by other teams. Instructed to chokeup on their hitting grip, Don Pope, Skip Tussey, Conrad Graham, and a host of others were successful in supplying the team with base hits.

Practicing every spring day on the tennis courts in Hanes Park, the 1967 tennis team, sparked by veterans Melvin Pearce, Lee Carlton, Bruce Fraser, and Holt Trotman, worked to perfect their game. Under the leadership of a new coach, the team fiercely challenged 4-A opponents.

Gymnasts coordinate body and mind

Gymnastics is a sport in which competition is secondary to the development of the individual. Always striving to improve their strength, agility, alertness, and skill, the boys in the gymnastics program worked all year at their own paces to perfect new stunts. A relatively recent addition to the Reynolds athletic program, gymnastics is open to all boys who show an interest in the challenging but rewarding activity. The gymnastics team gave several thrilling public performances this year.

Monogram Club sells Demon mugs

From ushering at special chapel programs to selling drinks at basketball games, the boys of the Monogram Club do their best in all projects to show their enthusiasm for Reynolds High. The club offers boys who have earned one or more letters in Reynolds sports an opportunity to further serve their school in ways other than athletic participation.

Several fund-raising projects were held to earn money for the purchase of athletic equipment. The Monogram Club also sold license plates proclaiming "R.J. Reynolds—Central 4-A Champs" and later ordered mugs bearing

RJR crests.

Speedball attracts hard-working enthusiastic girls

Practice for varsity speedball began in September and continued strenuously until the last game in November as three seniors, eleven juniors, and thirteen sophomores struggled to perfect their skills of dribbling, passing, and kicking. Traveling to Parkland, West, and High Point, the team racked up three losses. Meeting East, North, and Parkland at home resulted in two wins and a defeat, respectively. Usually, more wins than losses is the sign of a good team; however, those twenty-seven girls on the RJR team believe theirs is the best of all.

While nearly everyone else was still inspecting Christmas presents or eating "holiday hash," over a score of girls was practicing away at the First Baptist Church gymnasium. These girls were members of the varsity basketball team preparing for their first game on January 3. Composed of eleven sophomores, seven juniors, and five seniors, the team won only a few of its games, but has high aspirations for success in the years to come.

As the last of the varsity sports, softball is often robbed of participants by the excitement of graduation; however, it is not robbed of good sportsmanship or enthusiasm. Those girls on the team strive hard to end the year on a victorious note by defeating other Winston-Salem teams.

Volleyball attracts many would-be varsity players who practice daily to gain a position on the team. As the coaches emphasize "setting it up" and direct, forceful serves, the girls put their emphasis on playing as a team and enjoying themselves.

Student officials call intramural events

Many girls assume a position of leadership in after-school sports as officials: referees, timers, and scorers. Basketball, volleyball, and speedball games would become pure chaos without their help and guidance.

Clinics are held each year before every team sport, and all would-be officials must attend a certain percentage of the meetings, as well as pass a written test, to be accredited. Officials Club co-chairmen Judy Harbuck and Susan Hurst are responsible for telephoning the girls on the night before they are to officiate.

Points are awarded to each girl who officiates, scores, or times a game. These points are applied toward membership in the G.A.A. or toward retaining membership.

One facet of being a member of the Officials Club is calling the intramural games in the afternoon.

Gym leaders regulate daily P.E. classes

One little-known way for junior and senior girls to serve Reynolds is by being gym leaders. Every gym leader gives up one study hall per day to assist the physical education teachers with their classes.

Duties of the girls cover a broad range. They are responsible for having the proper sports equipment ready, supplying towels, and checking showers. They also type and do office work. During team sports such as speedball, volleyball, and basketball, the girls referee the games. If a class is unusually small, they even join in to fulfill team requirements.

GAA operates booth at March of Dimes Carnival

As the members of the Girls Athletic Association will testify, their organization does more than "go down to the gym and play every afternoon." Participation in sports is a vital part of the G.A.A. program, but there is definitely more.

In the middle of October, the thirty-member council spent a rewarding weekend at Camp Betty Hastings near Walkertown. This retreat served as an opportunity for the girls to get better acquainted, enjoy themselves, and discuss plans for the year's activities.

Despite injuries to Lee Dysart and Mike Gillespie, the Childrens' Home football team finished their season with a 5-5 conference standing. The team recorded victories over West Davidson, Yadkinville, and Mt. Tabor.

Only three members of the team were seniors, and early in the season the team had defense problems. Heavy afternoon workouts improved the defense, and the abundance of underclassmen makes the following seasons look promising.

Fighting Methodists Lee Dysart, Steve Gibson, Tommy Greenwood, Mike Huffstickler, and Sonny Connor were the major scorers for the season.

John Williams, playing guard and forward, averaged 13 points per game. Lee Dysart also proved himself valuable to the team with his ability to move quickly in tight situations.

Basketball is a fairly new sport for girls, but the Children's Home team seems to have mastered it well. Spurred by the speed of rovers Judy Weaver and Betty Plylar, and combined with the shooting accuracy of Dianne Whitt, the Children's Home girls ended their season with a 8-7 record. Students recall memories of

through

Features

As we reminisce over the past year, what comes to our mind? Studying, studying, studying!? Not at all, because this is not a complete picture of a year at Reynolds. The year at Reynolds includes classes, sports activities, and school events. Although the words "school spirit" automatically mean "sports and classes," it also encompasses the planning, preparing and execution of the traditional dances. A dance would not be quite complete without a queen to reign over it. The seniors chose Miss Patsy Johnson as the 1967 Black and Gold Queen. The opening dance of the season was the football homecoming, sponsored by the Key Club and S.S.C. For the sophomores, this was their preview of coming attractions. To the juniors, it meant another well-rounded year at Reynolds. To the seniors, it began the ending of three well-experienced years in Reynolds. Next, were the Christmas and New Year's Eve parties which rang the New Year in with a bang. With snow completing the scenery, the new Mid-winter dance came alive in Reynolds' gymnasium. Ending the year, the junior class honored the seniors at the annual Junior-Senior. These, too, are the memories we shall keep.

Class Poem

What will we remember
 When we no longer walk her halls?
Will the youthful laughter echo
 'Gainst our future family walls?
Will the knowledge from her books
 Help us fight the war of life?
Will the wonder of first love
 Become the door to years of strife?
Will the memory of the whisp'ring pines
 Come back to us again,
Or will visions of the future,
 As new memories, make hers wane?
Is her function as our nesting place
 Now spent, since we can fly?
Or do we cling to the familiar
 Watching life passing by?

These questions keep returning,
 Though the answers do not come.
Are we ready for life's battle?
 Our rightful burdens will we shun?
Now, before us stands her image,
 Tall and proud upon the hill.
As her courage swells inside us,
 For a moment we are still.
How can we doubt our futures,
 Though our fates remain untold?
After all her preparation,
 We are ready; we are bold.
While pausing at her portals,
 We sing one last refrain,
"Amid the pines, she proudly stands . . ."
 Indebted always, we'll remain.

Class History

SOPHOMORE CLASS HISTORY

The uncertainty of the weather matched our spirits as we, the rising sophomores, entered the R.J. Reynolds auditorium on September 1, 1964. Amidst the turmoil of orientation, we all searched for familiar faces. After having found a seat in the spacious auditorium, we listened attentively to the reassuring words of our student leaders and our principal, Mr. Tandy.

Although the youngest in age and fewest in number, we did not allow the upperclassmen to take complete advantage of us. Not many of us believed stories about chapel or radiator fees, but some of us did follow wrong directions to our classrooms. These pranks ceased after a few days, but the adjustment to new subjects and new rules continued for many weeks. The subject requirements seemed unreasonable. Whoever thought it possible to walk all the way to the gym and dress in only four minutes? Standing to speak in seventh period English after a trying day seemed absurd!

Fall brought with it the night of our first Reynolds High School football game. Uncertain of what awaited us, we went to our first pep rally but left fully aware of what was expected of us. In the pep rallies that followed we often "out-yelled" the upperclassmen in the favorite cheer, "Sophomores, Juniors, Seniors," although they were always reluctant to admit our louder cheering. The performance of many sophomores on the team gave us even more incentive to cheer. Supported by spirited students, the football players defeated Rocky Mount and Durham in the play-offs to clinch the state 4-A championship.

Several other events added to the excitement of all. We happily learned that we were to be the first sophomore class to have individual pictures in the annual, even though these pictures were only an inch square. Also, the Presidential election took place during this year. The students campaigned for their favorite candidate and held a school-wide "straw-ballot." Spellbound, we listened to the sports hero, Bob Richards, and appreciated our rare good fortune in having John Kenneth Galbraith as another of our Fine Arts Speakers.

As football helmets and shoulder pads returned to storage shelves, basketball season captured our attention. The cheerleaders, spectators, and players oftentimes found it demanding to complete their homework assignments and arrive at the gym on time for the opening tip-off. Once there, however, we settled back for some thrilling games. The climax of the season came when our junior varsity team, composed entirely of sophomores, won the Forsyth Invitational Tournament.

Christmas holidays served both as a "relaxer" from studies and a remainder of the nearness of exams. For many of us, exams were a new and dreaded event. Nevertheless, we procrastinated as long as we could. Then a heavy snowfall, which closed school, helped us to procrastinate still longer.

By springtime the unlucky ones of us who had not yet received our driver's permits had to take Driver Education, newly required by state law. Thus many of us had to "hoof it" until that long awaited sixteenth birthday.

The annual Key Club Follies in April had for the first time performances on two nights. Centered around the theme "Yesterday and Tomorrow," the acts varied from song and dance routines to a mock wrestling match. During the tryouts and rehearsals we sophomores exhibited much of the talent in our class.

As we participated, both as voters and candidates, in the spring elections we felt we were truly a part of the student government. We were proud of the election of representatives from our class to serve as leaders.

As our first year at Reynolds neared an end, we looked back on all that had transpired. "The Reynolds experience" had greatly developed our mental maturity and devotion to our school. We resolved that the next two years would be even more profitable for us.

JUNIOR CLASS HISTORY

With the carefree attitudes and pleasant memories of summer past, we somewhat reluctantly returned to the opened doors of R.J.R. With the poise of experience acquired from our first year at Reynolds, we felt quite sure of ourselves on opening day and cheerfully assumed the responsibilities of upperclassmen.

The renovation of the building, begun near the end of our sophomore year, was progressing in full force. For the first few days we had the opportunity of moving the furniture out of the rooms and into the halls during the seventh period, then out of the halls and back into the rooms the first period the next day. Our "thanks" was waxed floors. Often we had the enlightening experience of observing a highly skilled and industrious workman swing on scaffolding outside the window. As we found the better portion of a newly painted wall on our sleeve or listened to slate from the roof avalanching down long rampways, it was evident that much self-control was necessary from both teachers and students. When we proudly enjoyed the finished product, however, all of us felt that the renovation was indeed worth its temporary inconveniences.

Along with the changes in the physical appearance of the school, we readily noted other changes. A shift in the office administration brought Mr. Joe Hauser, an alumnus of Reynolds, back to his alma mater as assistant principal.

The juniors were well represented in all the athletic events. The football, basketball, swimming, and wrestling teams fared well during their seasons and, with many experienced juniors returning, promised even better seasons to come.

Christmas holidays were a welcome relief from studies but also a disheartening reminder of our exams to follow soon afterwards. Some of us advantageously used this brief interlude from school, while most of us tried to push momentarily from our minds the thought of "impending doom."

Soon came that most dreaded day of College Boards. With several "number two" pencils and a pounding heart, we made our way to the school early one Saturday morning, the day for the test to measure our mental perception gained from years of schooling. Although many of us felt inadequately prepared, we were later amazed at how well we had scored.

During the spring, many of our studious classmates on their induction into the National Honor Society received special recognition for their admirable scholastic attainments. In April we used the theme of "Camelot" to honor the seniors in the traditional prom. Days and nights of procrastination and preparation resulted in what we considered the best Junior-Senior ever. Other memorable events were the splendid Fine Arts lectures by Dr. James Cleland and Mark Van Doren.

Near the end of the school year, the student government elections were the focus of attention. This was the first campaigning by candidates and also the first presentation of Council and House candidates during the same chapel program.

The arrival of our class rings, annuals, and final exams abruptly shocked us into the realization that another year at R.J.R. was almost over. Though dreaming of the beach and vacation, we inevitably pondered on September, when we would again crowd through those opened doors—this time as Reynolds High School seniors.

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

Almost before we knew it, fall came and the beginning of our last year of high school. As we anxiously checked schedules and compared English teachers, we resolved to try harder than ever to make our senior activities worthwhile.

During the first few weeks of our senior year, we learned that a contemporary teen-age magazine had named Reynolds one of the fifty "grooviest" schools of the nation. Proud and happy, we realized that the reputation of our school was a result of the accomplishments of many years, not just our own. Led by Mr. Deaton, our new principal, we discovered that new faculty members, a visitors' parking lot, new guidance office facilities, and new course offerings could make even the "best" school better. The new courses - music theory, advanced composition, and boy's chorus - added a cultural dimension to our curriculum. We realized that Reynolds, while maintaining her fine tradition, was continually progressing.

As seniors, we proudly enjoyed our newly acquired privileges and delightedly basked in the respectful gazes of the underclassmen as we were at last the first to file out of the auditorium after chapel. While choosing superlatives, senior marshals, and class mascot, we realized that though the year had just begun, we were already preparing to leave Reynolds. With our many privileges came many responsibilities: College Boards again, Achievement Tests, college applications, and graduation plans. Some of the 74 per cent of our class who were college bound had been accepted under the Early Decision Plan. Others of us anxiously waited to hear from the college of our choice and from scholarship boards, including the National Merit Finalist Committee. Still others waited to hear from prospective employers, perhaps from Uncle Sam. In the fall we sponsored a tea in the library to honor two of our best-loved faculty members who were planning a December wedding.

Each season brought a different sport and new excitement. Pep rallies with shouting cheerleaders; half time shows by the majorettes, Dancing Boots, and band; weekly bulletin boards by the Pep Board; an exuberant spirit by the students, and the hard work of the football team, led by the senior players, all helped Reynolds earn the title of 4-A Central Champions. As the year progressed, basketball games and wrestling matches filled our week nights with many exciting moments. The baseball, track and cross-country teams, along with the girls' intramural activities, rounded out our flourishing sports program, involving many students with varied skills.

We were proud to see twenty-four members of our class march, candles in hand, into the National Honor Society during the winter induction. The usually solemn ceremony had some humorous moments in Dr. Kermit Traylor's address honoring the new members.

During the mid-term exams, interrupted again by snow, we relaxed at home on our newly-acquired holiday while our poor teachers used their work day to mark exam papers and average quarterly grades. But then after our holiday came the seventh period exam. We took a deep breath before plunging into the whirlpool of activities in our last spring at Reynolds. In February in the Reynolds Carnival, the service clubs and special interest clubs raised money for the March of Dimes. Another successful Key Club Follies again spotlighted the wide range of talent at our school. For the last time we participated in the Black and Gold Campaign to raise money for the sports program. As we danced at the Junior-Senior, we thought how much more rested we were than we had been as juniors. We enjoyed the lavish decorations, although we missed the months of junior preparation and anticipation.

Graduation suddenly upon us, we addressed invitations, studied for final exams, and signed our last annuals. During Class Day we watched as some of our classmates reminded us of the accomplishments and activities of our high school career. We shall always remember our graduation—the ceremony concluding three years of preparation for the bright years ahead. Now as we face the future, it seems only a few weeks have passed since we were bewildered sophomores. A bit sadly we tell those who follow us: "Cherish these years now, for they will pass too quickly."

Heritage

Her doors swing silently shut behind us as we end our years inside her sturdy walls. As we depart, we leave the stability and security of forty years of dedication to truth and wisdom. We begin our own efforts to solve the riddles, answer the questions, and discover the facts for which she has whetted our appetites. Although we may some day return to replenish our strength from hers, we know that we no longer are completely dependent upon her. She has given us her independence, her wisdom, and her searching spirit with which, one day, we too may discover truth.
